No News, Yet.
The Lindberghs' Appeal.
No Family Safe.
A National Disgrace.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

NO NEWS of the Lindbergh child at 5 o'clock yesterday when this was written.

Very wisely, Col. Lindbergh and his wife have signed a public statement in which they solemnly agree to pay the $50,000 ransom demanded, and to divulge nothing in connection with the negotiations that might lead to the apprehension of the kidnapers.

"Our only hope is in his immediate and safe return. We pledge ourselves that we shall not try to injure in any way those connected with the return of the child."

This statement signed, "Charles and Anne Lindbergh," can be relied upon absolutely by those that took the child.

BY RETURNING the stolen baby now, they can get the money that they want, and relieve the suffering of the unhappy mother, and protected by Col. Lindbergh's promise to make no revelation whatever concerning them, and take no further steps in the effort to bring about their arrest and conviction.

If they ignore the opportunity that is offered to them now, they will be the objects of a manhunt that would continue, if necessary, for 20 years.

The sercet service of the United States would join in that hunt. The criminals know that the U. S. Secret Service, in its dealings with counterfeiters and others, NEVER GIVES UP.

For their own safety, and in the name of human decency, the kidnapers are urged to communicate with Col. Lindbergh, either directly, or through anybody they may select, relying completely on the solemn pledges of the child's father and mother.

ANY NEWS except that concerning the stolen child, is not news at all, now. The head of a great nation might die, any extraordinary event might occur, nothing could take the public's attention, its tense, pitiful interest from the Lindbergh kidnaping.

That fact is a tribute to human nature, and the soundness of its intuitions.

The family is the foundation of society, all civilization is built upon it. And this most horribly outrageous invasion of the sanctity of the family makes every other conceivable happening seem unimportant.

LIFE, FAMILY, CHILDREN ARE NOT SAFE UNDER OUR GANGSTER RULE, FINANCED BY PROHIBITION.

THE HOUSE Ways and Means Committee indorses a sales tax of two and one-quarter per cent. This, it is to be hoped, does not mean interfering with the business of retail shops, or of business men generally. The right plan is to tax manufacturers at the source, which would automatically increase prices by the amount of the tax.

Since the government cannot get the money that it MUST have, otherwise, this tax probably is necessary.

NINE BILLION DOLLARS worth of railroads, namely the New York Central, Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio, Chesapeake and Ohio, may be merged in one great system. The Interstate Commerce Commission would have to give its consent. This it will do, if it has the intelligence of one full grown mosquito.

What this country needs is to save money, avoid waste in overhead and otherwise. The combination of these great railroads would mean the saving of hundreds of millions a year.

RUSSIA, WHOSE army is the most powerful in the world as regards numbers, and well equipped as regards machinery and especially airplanes, is massing troops as near as possible to Japan.

The idea is to be ready for anything the Japanese may do. Japan, well informed by her secret service, will probably do nothing against Russia.

China seems enough to handle just now.

AS PREDICTED in this newspaper yesterday the so-called truce between China and Japan has not stopped the fighting.

YESTERDAY'S LATE news reported two new battles started. The League has said:

"The fighting must stop."

That doesn't mean anything.

IF SOVIET RUSSIA puts her army close to Japan's new empire on the Manchurian border and says: "YOU MUST STOP FIGHTING," that will have some effect.

OUR NAVAL EGGS are all going into one basket. Practically the entire United States Navy is ordered to the Pacific Ocean. Only submarines and minesweepers will be left in the Atlantic.

If we SHOULD get into trouble with Asia, and if it SHOULD be proved that a few airships properly managed can sink any number of floating ships, something unpleasant might happen. But of course it won't.

THE DRUNKEN automobile driver we know well. The drunken airplane driver is a less familiar sight. One of his kind is said to have appeared above the town of Kenosha, performing a stunt dangerous to the pilot and to the people. The plane was found abandoned. The pilot had been seen to "stagger away." The plane had been stolen.

Drunken pilots will never be very numerous. The law of gravitation will take care of them.

4 SOUGHT AS KLINE JURY FIXERS

City Employe and Woman Said to Be Among Those Named on Butler Warrants

BULLETIN.

Allegheny County detectives today took an unidentified suspect in the Kline jury tampering investigation to Butler. The man, said to be a Pittsburgher, was being questioned at the District Attorney's office in Butler.

BUTLER, Pa., March 5.—Warrants have been issued for the arrest of four persons, one said to be a Pittsburgh city employe and another a woman, charged with attempting to influence jurors in the prospective trial of Mayor Charles H. Kline, of Pittsburgh, scheduled to open March 14.

District Attorney E. H. Negley declined to reveal the names of the defendants pending their arrest.

Informations were said to have been made before Alderman Porter Scott Thursday night after a hurried visit here of Prosecutor Andrew T. Park, of Allegheny County, and County Detective David Drexler.

PARK RETURNS

Park was on his way here today with his special council, Earl F. Reed, and the latter's law partners, W. D. Stewart.

Peter Connors, former chief investigator for the Pittsburgh Registration Commission, also was reported hurrying here in connection with the alleged jury-fixing case.

According to reports the four accused persons visited several of those included in the panel of jurors to report March 14 and told them "what a good fellow Mayor Kline was."

HOUSEWIFE GIVES TIP

One of those visited, a Butler housewife, is said to have disclosed the visit and the conversation to the Butler County authorities with the result that the informations were made.

A report that a woman was active in behalf of Kline and his ousted supplies director, Bertram L. Succop, who are charged with malfeasance in office and are to be tried here through a change of venue, was scouted as "just a rumor" by the Kline counsel several weeks ago.

Brick Injures Baby Watching Boys Fight

An innocent victim of a childish fight over a game of marbles, Richard Puchnoski, 3, of 324 Downing street, was in St. Francis Hospital today with a probable fracture of the skull.

The boy was struck with a brick over the left eye while watching the game near his home late yesterday. The missile was hurled by a boy, 15, who was arrested and taken to the Juvenile Court Detention Home. Because of his age the Sun-Telegraph will not publish his name.

5 Children, Mother Burned to Death

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., March 5.—(AP.)—The wife and five children of Robert Best were burned to death in a fire at North West Arm, Labrador, information reaching the Hudson's Bay Company here said.

4 ESCAPE GAS AS BABY CRIES

Awakened by the crying of one of his infant children, Nazarino Cicarelli, of 267 Hopewell street, Aliquippa, found his wife and two children partially overcome by gas, early today.

Fire Chief Clarence B. Ransom and Police Sergt. Wilbur Hohn used an inhalator for nearly an hour to revive the woman and her children.

WORKER HANGED ON TROLLEY

Hanged with a trolley rope, Joseph Fatach, 46, of 232 Steuben street, a Pittsburgh Railways Company car inspector, was found suspended in the rear of a street car on a siding at the Ingram car barn early today.

Police were told that Fatach had apparently unwound that portion of the trolley rope in the tension drum from its spool, looped it around his neck and had suspended himself by stepping from the car coupler.

His body was discovered by Paul M. Robertson, of 1324 Pritchard street, barn foreman, to whom Fatach earlier in the night had explained he was going to the rear of the barn to work.

Firemen were called to extinguish flames in an automobile on Third avenue, near Wood street, at 8 a. m. today. Little damage was done by the flames, firemen reported.

Drowning Story Saves Man On 'Ride;' Wins New Coat

Frank Petroglia, 21, who, yesterday, was believed to have leaped from the Smithfield Street Bridge, was back home today with a new coat—the gift, he says, of the gangsters who "took him for a ride."

Although attacked, overpowered and thrown into an automobile as he crossed the bridge, Petroglia says he was spared the end that is a "ride" victim's—thanks to the Sun-Telegraph.

Reading an account of Petroglia's reported suicide in the Sun-Telegraph when they arrived in Beaver Falls, his assailants learned their victim was the wrong man.

Embarrassed, as gangsters can be, they wanted to make things right. After a gracious apology, Petroglia was treated to a square meal, given a new coat and sent home.

SAILOR HELD IN KIDNAP SEARCH; 'LONE EAGLE' WAITS WORD TO FLY

ORDER CITY COMBED

Clark Commands Police To Search Every Home And Building Here.

Public Safety Director James M. Clark today ordered every member of the police department to visit every home and building in Pittsburgh in an effort to find trace of kidnaped Baby Lindbergh. Rooming houses will be searched.

Clark said:

"Although it is not likely that the kidnapers are in Pittsburgh, we are taking no chances. We are doing everything possible to recover the baby, if it is here, and apprehend the kidnapers."

At the same time Steubenville, O., police authorities notified Pittsburgh police to be on the lookout for an automobile containing three men and a boy believed to be James DeJute, Jr., kidnaped Niles, O., boy. The Ohio police said an automobile was seen passing through Weirton, W. Va., speeding in the direction of Pittsburgh.

ORDER ISSUED

Clark's order for the hunt to begin at once was issued to police inspectors early today. It started one of the most intensive "manhunts" in the history of Pittsburgh.

He also directed members of the fire department answering alarms in the rooming house sections of the North Side, East End, and Downtown to scan occupants of the houses.

Patrolmen were ordered to stop at every house on their beats, regardless of their acquaintance with its occupants, and question them as to the arrival of strangers in the neighborhood. Rooming houses are to be searched and proprietors instructed to report to Director Clark or Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh the arrival of strangers, particularly men and women with babies, who look suspicious. The order also applies to members of the radio and scout automobiles.

STATIONS WATCHED

Clark also ordered a more rigid scrutiny of arrivals at railroad stations and bus stops on the assumption that since 72 hours have elapsed since the infant was stolen from its bed at Hopewell, N. J., the kidnapers may leave their hiding place and attempt to escape.

Supt. Walsh was in Trenton, N. J., today attending a conference of police officials of nearly a score of leading cities with Gov. Harry A. Moore. The conference was called by Gov. Moore to lay plans for a nationwide search for the kidnaped infant.

IMMUNITY OPPOSED

Attorney General Insists Abductors Be Prosecuted To Limit of Law.

By QUENTIN REYNOLDS
International News Service.

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 5.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today was ready at a moment's notice to undertake a flight for a goal more priceless than the wealth, fame and glory he won in his conquest of the Atlantic.

He hoped to find his kidnaped 20-month-old son at the end of his proposed journey to Hartford, Conn., where Henry (Red) Johnson, friend of Betty Gow, nursemaid of the Lindbergh baby, was in custody of authorities, who questioned him all night.

At Newark airport, crowds patiently waited through the night hoping for a glimpse of Lindbergh, who, according to a radio broadcast, was to hop off some time during the night.

The plane, which Lindbergh borrowed on the Pacific Coast to speed with his wife to the Morrow home on his return from the Orient on the occasion of Senator Dwight W. Morrow's death was held in readiness for him. However, Lindbergh had not taken off at an early hour today.

Johnson, questioned in the nation-wide hunt for the kidnapers of Charles Augustus Lindbergh,

YOUTH CENTER OF BABY HUNT

By LESLIE E. MOORE
International News Service.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 5.—Henry Johnson, a tall red-headed youth of about 26 years, today became the center of the nation-wide hunt to find the kidnaped son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Taken into custody here last night, Johnson, friend of Miss Betty Gow, nursemaid of the missing child, was again being quizzed today despite assertions by New Jersey State Police that he was never wanted in connection with the kidnaping.

Details of what the authorities had learned from Johnson, who said he came here from Englewood, N. J., to visit a brother, were kept secret.

Authorities said detaining of Johnson, described as a yacht worker, sailor and chauffeur and said to have been at one time in the Lindbergh employ, was the

Woman Robs Bank, Aided by Gunmen

SEATTLE, March 5.—(AP.)—A woman robbed the People's North Seattle Bank of about $5,000 today, aided by two men. She was described as about 30 years old, wearing a blue sweater and a dark dress.

The woman ran in and scooped up the money. Her retreat was covered by her companions, who carried pistols.

Baby's Birth Certificate Frees 2 Autoists Here

The resemblance of Baby Joseph Palmer, Jr., to the Lindbergh infant landed the Palmers, of Harrisburg, in South Side Police Station early today.

Mr. and Mrs. Palmer, aware of the similarity, fortified themselves with a birth certificate of their child before leaving on an automobile trip, and that won their release.

An alert pedestrian of whom the Palmers asked direction in Hays last night reported the presence of the baby in the automobile to police.

LINDY SET FOR HOP TO CONFRONT HARTFORD SUSPECT

PARENTS GAIN NEW HOPE IN SEARCH

Detention of Sweetheart Of Nurse Leads to Belief Solution May Be Near

Jr., who was taken from his crib by abductors Tuesday night and carried off in the darkness of the night, telephoned Miss Gow the night the baby disappeared.

Lindbergh also received word from Connecticut officials Johnson owned an automobile in which was found a milk bottle.

PARENTS CHEERED BY NEWS

Both Lindbergh and his wife the former Anne Morrow were reported tremendously buoyed up by the new clue, which came to them at the end of three days filled with false "tips," a deluge of inspiring or threatening letters, and the apparent fruitlessness of the most gigantic manhunt in the history of the country.

Information that both a postal card and a letter addressed to Lindbergh were discovered in the Hartford Postoffice and that both in their addresses contained an inverted "J" similar to the card mailed from Newark soon after the baby was kidnaped especially interested those in the Lindbergh home.

Johnson was reported to be unemployed, but to have formerly worked on the yacht of Thomas W. Lamont, financier and Morgan partner.

AWAITS DEFINITE WORD

Lindbergh was awaiting definite advices from Hartford before deciding on the flight, it was learned early today.

From his isolated white house on top of Sourland Mountain, word was sent to John J. Toohey, secretary to Gov. Moore at Trenton, that the "Lone Eagle" would proceed to Hartford only "if developments warranted it."

The simple, affecting appeal the distraught parents made to the kidnapers of their curly-haired, blue-eyed son still remained unanswered today.

Lindbergh, who unflinchingly ly braved the perils of the air when his own life only was at stake, and Mrs. Lindbergh, whose indomitable courage in the face of heartbreaking tragedy has endeared her to all, begged the kidnapers for their baby "on any terms."

STATE REFUSES IMMUNITY

But the dramatic plea, flashed throughout the nation within a few minutes after being issued, failed to induce those who stole the world's most famous baby to communicate with the Lindberghs, even though promised ransom and immunity.

While the parents privately offered immunity, the state did not follow their lead. Attorney General William A. Stevens, at Trenton, declared "New Jersey will grant no immunity" to the kidnapers.

His declaration came on the heels of a reported statement by County Prosecuter Marshall that the kidnapers, if they restored the baby safely, would not be prosecuted.

VETOES POLICE REMOVAL

Despite the Stevens pronouncement, one plan was seriously considered to provide free access to the lonely home by the kidnapers.

The army of blue-clad troopers, the cordon of detectives and police officials who now throng the estate's grounds were to be withdrawn for 12 or 24 hours under this proposal.

It was urged that this move would indicate to the abductors that they were safe should they get in direct communication with Lindbergh.

But the "Lone Eagle," temporarily, at least, vetoed this step, it was reported, since he believed the pledge he and his wife extended to the captors of his baby must have convinced them, if anything could, that their emissary would not be molested.

POLICE PARLEY CALLED

There was one more development heartening Mr. and Mrs. Lindbergh who, worn by the heartrending strain of the past few days, their lack of sleep, their alternate rising and ebbing hope of recovering their boy, both contracted slight colds.

It was the summoning of an extraordinary conference, unique in modern criminal history, of police chiefs and officials to co-ordinate all agencies engaged in solving the kidnaping.

Governors, mayors, high police officials and celebrated detectives from cities from the east coast to the Mississippi were to gather at Trenton today at the request of Gov. Moore.

HUGE CANVASS PROBABLE

Out of this swift action was promised to imbue the intense hunt of the past 80 hours with an even greater vigor. It was likely that a minute, house-to-house canvass of the entire eastern section of the country would be determined upon in the pursuit of the abductors.

For, despite the colossal drag-net with which the country was covered within a few hours after the Lindbergh baby was stolen, not one definite trail to the kidnapers or their whereabouts was picked up.

Throughout last night, lights blazed from almost every window of the wood-ringed white house where headquarters are established for the troopers and police. A light snow fell, covering the countryside.

BETTY QUIZZED AGAIN

Betty Gow, whose friend was held in Hartford for questioning, herself had been examined once more by detectives, as were Oliver Wheatley, butler, and his wife who acts as housekeeper.

It was announced Miss Gow, the first to find the Lindbergh baby was missing from the nursery, was entirely cleared of any suspicion.

Five men were questioned late last night by the troopers in the headquarters here. Mystery was maintained concerning the identity of the quartet.

Many of the ransom notes and threatening letters being received at the Lindbergh home were taken over by federal detectives from the Treasury Department, sent here to help at the instance of President Hoover.

GOVERNOR VISITS PARENTS

Gov. Moore called at the home during the day and talked with Mr. and Mrs. Lindbergh. He said, later:

"Both Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh are bearing up under the strain of uncertainty.

"Mrs. Lindbergh keeps up her husband's courage and he sustains hers. They are a very courageous couple."

Lindbergh has received from David S. Ingalls, assistant secretary of the Navy in charge of aeronautics, an offer to "put any of our naval facilities" at his disposal.

Despite his great sorrow, the famous Lindbergh smile familiar to millions still hovers at times on his face, though there is a pathetic wistful quality in it now.

The colonel went for a walk with the little black and white terrier, the terrier which failed to bark when the baby was kidnaped. He tramped through the woods for a short while.

WALSH IN N. J. KIDNAP PARLEY

Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh was in New Jersey today attending the conference of Gov. Harry A. Moore to which police heads of a dozen large cities have been invited.

Plans for the recovery of the kidnaped son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh will be discussed at the meeting. Before his departure for New Jersey, Superintendent Walsh telephoned the New Jersey state police information regarding a kidnaping gang, the leader of which was said to be in New Jersey.

In the conference are police officials of Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Cleveland, Philadelphia, New York, Jersey City and Newark.

LANDLADY GIVES SAILOR ALIBI

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., March 5.—(AP.)—Mrs. W. T. Sherman, who operates a rooming house at 41 James street, said today Henry (Red) Johnson, held in Hartford, Conn., for questioning in connection with the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby, was at her home all Tuesday evening.

The Lindbergh baby was kidnaped from Hopewell, N. J., Tuesday night.

Mrs. Sherman said further that Johnson did not leave her home, where he was rooming, until the following day, Wednesday. She professed lack of knowledge of any telephone call supposedly made by Johnson to Miss Betty Gow, nursmaid of the kidnaped child, at the Hopewell home of the Lindberghs.

The landlady, whose hearing is defective, had difficulty in understanding questions put to her over the telephone. When told Johnson was being held in Hartford, she said sharply:

"I don't think he had anything to do with it."

Expressing her annoyance at the numerous telephone calls and visits made to her home as a result of the questioning of Johnson, Mrs. Sherman said she was "going to ask the cops to keep people away from here."

SAILOR GRILLED ON LINDBERGH ABDUCTION

Police See Important Clue As Baby Search Centers On Young Yacht Worker

most important development in the search to date for the abductors of the world's most famous baby.

PRISONER GRILLED HOURS

The investigation turned to this city shortly after 7 o'clock last night when Capt. George J. Sullivan of the Hartford police took Johnson into custody for questioning.

County Detective Edward J. Hickey was immediately called into the case. He questioned Johnson for hours at the West Hartford police station and then, with Capt. Sullivan, took Johnson to his office at the Hartford County Building.

Alcorn, after a conference with Hickey, talked over the telephone with John J. Toohey, secretary to Gov. A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey. He told Toohey:

"We've got a car and we've got a milk bottle found in the car."

He also said Johnson had admitted he had talked with Miss Gow by telephone Tuesday night, the night the baby was stolen from his nursery in the Hopewell, N. J., home. Johnson visited Miss Gow Sunday night, Alcorn said, and he had an appointment to meet her Tuesday night.

Johnson is a tall, blue-eyed youth, slender and well set up. His personal appearance is pleasing.

New Jersey Police 'Clear' Sailor

By QUENTIN REYNOLDS
International News Service.

TRENTON, N. J., March 5.—(INS.)—Any hopes that Henry (Red) Johnson, sailor friend of Betty Gow, the nurse of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's baby son, might hold the key to the child's kidnaping were blasted here today by Maj. Charles Shoeffel, of the New Jersey state police.

Despite the fact that Johnson was questioned all night by police of Hartford, Conn., where he had gone to visit his brother the morning after the kidnaping, Maj. Shoeffel insisted that he was not wanted in connection with the Lindbergh kidnaping. He said:

"Johnson was never wanted. He is not wanted now. He has never been suspected in connection with the kidnaping."

Maj. Shoeffel was asked how it happened that Johnson was picked up by the Hartford police, who asserted they had acted at the request of New Jersey authorities. He said:

"Hopewell has never wanted him."

Johnson is a resident of Englewood. It was there that he met Miss Gow, in whom both the Lindbergh family and the police place implicit confidence.

JAPANESE LAND NEW TROOPS IN CHINA

10,000 Reinforcements Sent As Fighting Continues; Nanking Spurns Parley

SHANGHAI, March 5.—(AP.)—Approximately 10,000 additional Japanese troops were landed in the Shanghai area today and the crackle of machine guns and occasional crashes of heavy artillery fire still resounded over the countryside between Kiangwan and the banks of the Yangtze.

Japanese military and naval authorities continued to maintain there has been no serious fighting since the Japanese advance was halted two days ago, but a trip through the Kiangwan and Woosung area today supported Chinese claims that there has been considerable skirmishing along the northwest sector.

Gunfire was heard frequently and a squadron of Japanese planes roared overhead in the direction of the Yangtze.

Meanwhile, it was reported from Nanking that large forces of Japanese troops were vigorously attacking Nanziang.

CHINA SPURNS PARLEY

NANKING, Mar. 5.—(INS.)—Quo Tai-Chi, vice foreign minister, announced officially today that China would not participate in the armistice conference at Shanghai proposed by the League of Nations.

Not only were the Japanese terms unacceptable, he said, but the continued landing of Japanese troops makes China doubt Japan's assurances.

JAP CAPITALIST SLAIN

TOKIO, Mar. 5.—(AP.)—Baron Takuma Dan, managing director of the House of Mitsui, which controls one of the world's greatest fortunes and is Japan's leading commercial organization, was shot and killed today in the heart of Tokio's financial district.

The assassin was immediately arrested. He was Goro Hietinuma, 21, a farm boy from the Barak prefecture in a rural district north of Tokio, whence also came the slayer of Jannosale Inouye, former minister of finance, who was shot last month.

Bogus Lindy Flash From Mystery Radio

ALBANY, N. Y., March 5.—(AP.)—A general call from an unknown station, stating "Lindbergh baby safe," was picked out of the air last night by William Garrett, a radio operator for American Airways at the Albany airport.

The message was preceded by the letters "QST," which is a call to all stations to stand by.

SMITH MEETS ROOSEVELT

ALBANY, N. Y., March 5.—(AP.)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt and former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, both candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination, had a half-hour talk in the executive's office yesterday.

Also calling on the Governor were Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, and Surrogate James A. Foley. Foley, like Walker, is viewed as a power in Tammany Hall.

It was the second private chat between Smith and Gov. Roosevelt since political developments placed them in opposing camps in the preconvention campaign.

Asked by newspapermen concerning the nature of yesterday's talk with the former Governor, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"We talked state finances, unemployment relief and taxes."

DOWNTOWN FIRE LOSS $10,000

A fire in a cigar distributing concern on the third floor of a four-story building at 951 Liberty avenue damaged the structure and threatened an adjoining four-story building occupied by the Republic Rubber Co., early today. Damage was estimated at $10,000 by Deputy Fire Chief Frank Jones.

According to firemen, the blaze worked from the third floor to the unoccupied fourth floor of the building where it was confined. The unoccupied second floor and the first floor, occupied by the Pittsburgh Trunk Co., were damaged by water.

Streams were played in the adjoining building of the rubber concern when threatening flames leaped from the third and fourth floors of the burning structure. Heavy water damage was reported.

Late traffic was blocked by fire apparatus for nearly an hour. The alarm was sounded by a pedestrian.

James Welsh, a fireman of No. 3 Engine Co., suffered a slight laceration of the wrist while fighting the fire. The wound was dressed by a patrol crew, and the fireman returned to work.

FLINN TO FILE PETITION FOR AUDITOR

Resentment Over Stadtfeld Slight Brings Action; Clark Enters Race for Delegate

Petitions to make Ralph E. Flinn a candidate for the Republican nomination for Auditor General will be filed in Harrisburg Monday. Flinn probably will go to Harrisburg for the filing.

Decision of Flinn to become a candidate against Senator Frank Baldwin, of Potter County, is an outgrowth of resentment in Allegheny County against refusal of the Philadelphia Republican organization and the state committee to support Judge Joseph Stadtfeld, of Pittsburgh, as a candidate for the Superior Court position he now holds through appointment by Gov. Pinchot.

Baldwin was slated by the same group which refused to back Stadtfeld.

SOLID BACKING SOUGHT

An effort will be made to secure for Flinn solid Republican support in Allegheny County, and he is planning an intensive campaign through the state. Before announcing his candidacy yesterday he had spent several hours in conference with County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, and E. J. Kaufmann, department store head.

Flinn will become part of the protest ticket which is headed by Brig. Gen. Smedley Butler as a candidate for the United States Senate against Senator James J. Davis. It is surmised that Charles A. Waters, present Auditor General, will be on both tickets for State Treasurer.

Judges William M. Parker and Robert Gawthrop will be supported by all factions for the Superior Court, but the independents will substitute the name of Stadtfeld for that of former Lieut. Gov. Arthur James, who has the backing of the Vare organization, and whose preference over Stadtfeld led to all the dissension.

CLARK FOR DELEGATE

Safety Director James M. Clark, of the Fourteenth Ward, has authorized the circulating of petitions to place his name on the Republican primary ballot as a candidate for delegate to the National Convention from the Thirty-third District.

E. J. Wuerthele, of the Fifteenth Ward, is seeking the Democratic nomination as State Senator from the Forty-third District, according to petition blanks issued yesterday. A few days ago Wuerthele took out petitions for the Republican nomination in opposition to State Senator James J. Coyne, who is running to succeed himself.

Matthew A. Dunn, of Mt. Oliver, blind member of the General Assembly, has taken out petitions for the Republican nomination to succeed himself from the Twelfth District. Some time ago Dunn took out petitions for member of Congress from the Thirty-fourth District, but it is believed he has abandoned the idea.

Two former members of the Legislature are seeking Republican nominations. They are A. B. Davidson, of Tarentum, from the Thirteenth District, and J. R. Wylie, of Wilkinsburg, from the Tenth District.

RACE FOR LEGISLATURE

Ralph E. Carney, of the Third Ward, is seeking the Republican nomination as a member of the Legislature from the First District. M. L. Thompson, of Wilkinsburg, is seeking a place on the Democratic primary ballot as a candidate for Congress from the Thirty-first District.

The Allegheny County Bar Association adopted a resolution yesterday declaring the reported agreements between politicians that "threaten" the candidacies of Judge Stadtfeld and Judge Robert S. Gawthrop, of West Chester County, to succeed themselves on the Superior Court bench, are "unfair, un-American and contrary to the plain purposes of partisan primary statutes."

The resolution recalled that the Bar Association adopted a resolution last December 4, "attesting the integrity and qualifications of Judges Stadtfeld and Gawthrop, who are now candidates for re-election."

Mrs. Caraway Urges Death for Kidnaping

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 5.—(AP.)—Senator Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas, "would gladly support a measure making kidnaping a capital offense," she said here yesterday while inquiring for news of the Lindbergh baby. She declared:

"There is no punishment that could be devised that would be commensurate with such a crime."

Council Favors $500,000 Relief and Bond Vote

Leaders in City Council have agreed to put through on Monday an emergency appropriation of $500,000 for direct relief and to allow the voters to pass on a $5,000,000 peoples bond issue to combat unemployment, provided it is legal.

This decision was announced by President of Council John S. Herron following a secret conference with leaders of the Allegheny County Emergency Association yesterday. It was also disclosed the emergency association plans to ask County Commissioners for a $10,000,000 bond issue.

In addition to Herron, Councilmen Robert Garland and W. Y. English and Controller James P. Kerr and Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt, were present. The question of putting the $5,000,000 bond issue on the primary ballots April 26 was submitted to Waldschmidt for an opinion.

That funds of the Emergency Association will be exhausted by March 15 was revealed at the conference. Herron said Council has a borrowing power of $1,500,000 for relief, and expressed hope that the bond issue to furnish work will prove legal.

Representing the Emergency Association were A. K. Oliver, E. W. Mudge, Thomas M. Dunn, Maj. Philip Mathews and Frank N. B. Bell. City Controller James P. Kerr was also in the conference.

FIND NEW CLUES IN JOHNSTOWN

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., March 5.—(AP.)—Fresh clues indicating the Lindbergh kidnaping might have been plotted in Johnstown have been uncovered by Cambria County detectives.

Cambria authorities, in communication with state police in Western Pennsylvania, declined to comment on their inquiry, but John Gross, chief of detectives yesterday made this statement:

"From important information obtained today we have reason to believe that the kidnaping of the Lindbergh child was organized and plotted in Johnstown and that the actual kidnaping might have been perpetrated by Johnstown gangsters or persons employed by Johnstown gangs."

In addition to the tracing of a milk bottle top, bearing the name of a Johnstown dairy and found in Newark, O., police admitted they had other "important information."

Lindy Kidnaping Held 'Inside Job'

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 5.—(AP.)—Max Price, victim of Connecticut's most recent kidnaping, labeled the abduction of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., as an "inside job" today as the search for the famous aviator's 20-month-old son was centered in this state. Man Being Grilled In Lindbergh Case Former Sailor

NEW YORK, March 5.—(INS.)—Henry ("Red") Johnson, being questioned today in Hartford, Conn., in connection with the kidnaping of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., met Betty Gow, the missing baby's nursemaid, while employed by Thomas W. Lamont, New York financier. Lamont is a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co.

The late Senator Dwight W. Morrow, father of Mrs. Lindbergh, was a partner of Lamont in the Morgan firm. The Lamonts and Morrows occupied nearby estates in the summer.

Johnson also was reported to have been employed at one time as a chauffeur for Lindbergh, and met Miss Gow when the Morrows and Lindberghs exchanged visits with the Lamonts.

Police, it was revealed today, learned from Johnson's brother, Fred, that Henry or "Red" was employed on Lamont's yacht when he became acquainted with the Scotch girl, who acted as nursemaid in the Lindbergh home.

Lamont's private secretary today revealed Johnson had worked on the Reynard, Lamont's yacht, for the past two summers. He was released in the fall but told he would be re-employed the following spring.

Joseph Uleonga, 32, of Wesslyn, Pa., who last night attempted to telephone to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and later declared he had some knowledge of the whereabouts of Col. Lindbergh's kidnaped son, was being held for investigation by city detectives today.

Uleonga was arrested in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Station after he had inquired about the train fare to Hopewell, N. J., and attempted to telephone Col. Lindbergh. The man told detectives he was picked up by three men in a sedan at Canonsburg who let him off in McKeesport.

During the ride he said he heard the three men remark that the Lindbergh baby was being held in a frame house 20 miles from the Lindbergh home.

HOOVERS PRAY FOR BABY LINDY

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP.)—In common with America's millions, the President at the White House and Mrs. Hoover in the South, are waiting prayerfully to hear that the tiny son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh had been found.

The anxiety felt everywhere reached into yesterday's meeting of the cabinet, where a report was made of the aid volunteered by the federal departments to state authorities seeking to solve the kidnaping. In a brief informal discussion, expressions of concern were exchanged while official business waited.

NEW YORK, March 5.—(AP.)—Any baby fingerprints found on the Lindbergh child's toys may be useful, police experts say. Even if Charles stays missing until he's 50 years old, they would be a sure means of identification then.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., March 5.—(INS.)—Reports from Chicago that a woman and her associates were holding the kidnaped Lindbergh baby in a house here were declared unfounded by police who made an immediate investigation. They declared the address given was a vacant lot.

Ann Harding, the blonde stage and screen star, who had one scare from a threatened abduction, employed guards for her little daughter, Jane. For some time employes on the estate of Harold Lloyd, the comedian, have been equipped to handle a possible extortion raid, but a pair of private detectives was added to this guard yesterday. The Lloyd children are Gloria, Marjorie Elizabeth and Harold Jr.

BELL DIRECTS PISTOL HUNT

UNIONTOWN, Pa., March 5.—(AP.)—Tony Bell, former Fayette County detective who recently confessed participation in the John Donohoe murder of 1929, yesterday directed two divers searching for the murder pistol.

The divers, under instructions from Bell, who calmly sat in a skiff, searched the Monongahela River for hours where Bell said the pistol was thrown. The divers said they found nothing but would return to the task today.

Hundreds of men, women and children lined the river banks while the search went on.

Bell, acquitted of the slaying, confessed in Buffalo, N. Y., that he had participated in the plot growing out of racketeering and he implicated Robert C. Bledsoe and Cosmo Stangoni in the killing.

Bledsoe, also a former county detective and Stangoni, described by police as a petty racketeer, are in the Fayette County Jail. Bell was lodged in the state police barracks.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 5.—(AP.)—A stronger, healthier Andrew W. Mellon than the workweary man who recently left the Treasury will go to the Court of St. James to take up ambassadorial duties where Charles G. Dawes left off.

Eleven years of worry over national finances had left a mark on the former secretary at the treasury when he arrived here soon after leaving that post for a short rest.

Exercise, relaxation, and the lifting of a load of care have practically erased that mark. The ambassador said:

"I'm feeling better and better every day."

In addition to his customary walk, Mr. Mellon rode out to the Augusta National Golf Club course with Bobby Jones.

During the last days of Lent, many folks will vary life at home with visits to resorts or with brief visits to New York.

Among those at resorts are Andrew W. Mellon, newly appointed Ambassador to the Court of St. James, and his son in-law and daughter, the David D. Estes Bruces, who are at Augusta, Ga.

The John W. Herberts and their daughter, Mrs. Edward Delaney Dunn, entertained with a tea Thursday in Salubrity Hall in their honor. The same day Mr. Mellon and Mr. Bruce were visitors to the partially completed Augusta national golf course.

The Roy A. Hunts are expected home from New York Sunday, where they stopped at the Madison Hotel.

Mrs. James B. Laughlin, of Devonshire street, is another Pittsburgher spending some time in New York. She is stopping at the Barclay.

Congress Department Hears Talk on Buying

Bishop Brown, of the research bureau for retail training at the University of Pittsburgh, speaking before the home department of the Congress of Clubs yesterday gave an informative talk on the "Buying Habits of Women" and their development in the last 50 years. The selective power during that time had been transferred from men to women, 85 per cent of purchasing being done by women and the remaining 15 per cent being influenced by women's opinion, Mr. Brown said. He classified purchasers in three groups, wealth, medium and the wage earner and made interesting comparisons in the percentages of special home equipment purchased by these groups. Returned merchandise, Mr. Brown stated, amounted to $16,000,000 in 1930. This meant a loss of 10 per cent to the merchants, he said.

Informal Celebrations to Be Held By Many Troops in County On 20th Birthday

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Although Allegheny County Girl Scouts as a whole will have no special celebration of scouting's twentieth anniversary on March 12, informal celebrations will be held in many of the individual troops.

What might be considered as a birthday celebration, however, is the "Girl Scout Day" which the Kiwanis Club will have on Wednesday at the Fort Pitt Hotel. Mrs. Laura Holland MacDonald, county director, will tell the men about scouting, and in the lobby of the hotel several Scouts will demonstrate baby care, woodcraft, nature lore and handicraft.

On April 2 county scouts will have a service exhibit in the Wabash Building, which will be one of the biggest enterprises of the year.

This month's bulletins announce a bridge, bingo and "500" party at the Enright Theater for Monday at 12:30. There's to be a favor for each table, tea will be served and after the games the women will see the current picture.

Holding Benefit

On Monday, the fourteenth, the club will have its regular meeting in the East Liberty Young Women's Christian Association, and will be addressed by Dean D. Edwin Miller, of Peabody High School. He is to speak on "New Trends in Public School Education."

The dramatic department of Dormont New Century Club presented the program for the club at large yesterday, introducing Miss Bernice Loftus in two groups of Irish songs, and Miss Helen Irwin, who read an Irish play. Mrs. C. Warren Kinder played Miss Loftus' accompaniments.

DESIGNERS SHOW NEW SPRING HATS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, March 5.—Hats are riding high just now. Not only because this is the hat season of the year, but because every hat here seems to be designed with an eye to high back treatment. No doubt the perky little quills help create the silhouette, for it made us realize how youthful this type of treatment and trimming can be. At any rate, we have been told that saleswomen find little difficulty in persuading almost any woman to buy a hat with high back trimming. Its vivacious and flattering note sells itself. You will like most of the new hats. They are colorful, individual and eminently wearable. Each house is showing little distinguishing touches, trade-marks, as it were. Agnes is going in for the peaked crown, another very attractive and youthful note that you will like when it reaches you soon, as interpreted in her new spring models.

* * *

WE SHOW TODAY a sketch of a new spring hat and of a winter sports ensemble that has been very successful at Mt. Moritz. The spring hat is by Francine and is in yellow straw. The high back trimming is represented by a stiff loop and upright end of the Italian straw, and the trimming is drawn through a pleated cockade of yellow and red ribbon. The crown of the hat has three tucks at the side back, while the narrow brim dips over one eye and at the opposite side, near the back, is caught into the ribbon cockade. The ensemble is by Agnes and shows the peaked crown that will mark this modiste's spring hats. The material used is called "duffl" and is a variety of shantung. Two colors are combined, white and cherry red. The cuff brim is soft and flexible and is rolled back like a toboggan cap.

THE STORY OF JOHN N. GARNER

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

(Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc. All Rights Reserved.)

CHAPTER XIV.

John N. Garner took the Democratic leadership in the House not as a compliment or an honor, but as a sacred responsibility.

The Speakership carried with it, in his conception, obligations, to the country, to the House and to the party.

All of his acts and policies since he assumed the duties of that high office have been with these three obligations in mind.

The seriousness with which he regarded his obligations to the House—to the Congress—was made manifest when, through his influence, the body over which he presided, in passing a temporary tariff bill early in the present year, embodied in that measure a provision requiring the Tariff Commission to make its reports to the Congress, instead of to the President of the United States.

This was the first step which had been taken to restore the prestige of Congress in tariff making, which had been seriously impaired by the Act creating the Tariff Commission, when the Constitutional prerogative of Congres, over the tariff, had been weakened by the transfer of a large part of that power to the executive branch of the government.

The seriousness with which he regarded his obligation to his party was exemplified by his action in initiating a joint Democratic Steering Committee, of Senate and House, for the determination, within the party, of party policies.

This Joint Steering Committee has functioned well from the beginning. Party problems are threshed out between the leaders of both branches of Congress, one of them being the Speaker himself. Conflicts of opinion within the party, if any exist, are smoothed out before they could become embarrassing.

Thus Speaker Garner successfully sought on the eve of an important presidential election, to avoid party mistakes in Congress which might be prejudicial to the party interest in the national field.

The obligation which the Speaker feels to the country—to the American people—is reflected in every official action.

He keeps in close touch with all the chairmen of committees which are considering bills. Having no distatorial powers, he accomplishes by conference and persuasion what the old-fashioned, czar-like speakers, Reed and Cannon, sought to accomplish by arbitrarily throttling the individual members of the House.

To Keep Budget Down

In the interest of the people who pay the taxes which support the expensive governmental machine, he called into conference all the chairmen of the sub-committees of the Appropriations Committee, and obtained from them a promise that not one dollar would be added to the budget, but that in the case of each separate appropriation bill, every economy possible would be made. This pledge has been splendidly adhered to.

Large savings to the taxpayers will result, by the time the supply bills for the next fiscal year have been completed.

The same loyalty that, as a worker in the ranks, he gave in the years gone by to his leaders in the House is now being given freely to Speaker Garner by his associates in the House.

The man who has been tried by his colleagues for so many years, and proved "four square to all the winds that blow," is now profiting by the rewards that honor and character invariably confer.

The House of Representatives has never functioned better or more smoothly, or more in the interest of the general public welfare, than it is functioning today.

When the Seventy-second Congress convened, no Democratic aspirant for the Speakership appeared against him. His party turned to him, as a man, as the recognized leader. There was no thought of anybody else. Hence no party dissentions occurred to weaken party solidarity.

A Slender Majority

In view of the slender majority by which the party controls the House, this has been of the utmost importance.

A great many Southern men have risen by seniority in the House to places of party leadership. His defeat in the Sixty-seventh Congress had cost Henry T. Rainey, the veteran of Illinois, his high place on Ways and Means. He had gone back to that committee, when he returned to the Sixty-eighth Congress, but lower down. At the opening of the Seventy-second Congress, James W. Collier, of Mississippi, was ranking Democrat on that committee, and became the chairman.

This chairmanship ordinarily would have carried with it the position of majority leader. Mr. Collier stepped aside, in order that the leadership on the floor might go to a Northern Democrat. This was not only a tribute to Rainey, but to Garner as well.

The duties of the Speakership are arduous. Thus far the legislative days have been long. Much important business has been transacted.

Speaker Garner is on the floor, in conference, or in his office, throughout the day.

He and Mrs. Garner live at the Washington Hotel, at Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, opposite the Treasury. They have a small and modest apartment.

Hard-Working Secretary

Mrs. Garner, the indefatigable secretary, is an early riser. She goes to the Capitol every morning an hour or so ahead of the Speaker, and has the mail ready for his inspection by the time he reaches his office.

The Speaker every morning walks the historic mile, from Treasury to Peace Monument. There he usually takes a street car, for the long winding ride up Capitol Hill.

For a good many years past the Vice President and the Speaker of the House have been given official automobiles. In Speaker Longworth's time, he and Garner usually left the Capitol together every evening, in the official automobile. Garner always referred to it jokingly — and prophetically — as "our car."

But when he became Speaker, Mr. Garner declined the official automobile. This was not a mere gesture. The cost of the car and the up-keep amounts to some $10,000 a year, and while even such a saving is important now, it was not wholly for the reason of economy that Mr. Garner declined the customary "Speaker's car."

The Garners have never owned a car in Washington and they couldn't see why they should accept one at the public expense. The rarely go out in a social way, never into what is called smart society.

Just Plain People

When somebody asked Mrs. Garner what she would do about the matter of precedence at official affairs, which had caused an amusing controversy between Vice President Curtis and the late Speaker Longworth, she looked surprised and said:

"Why, precedence doesn't mean anything to us—we are just two people from Texas."

And there, indeed, one finds the keynote to the character of this wholesome American family.

At the hote' they enjoy the society of a circle of some forty or more Congressional families. In the parlors, of evenings, they play a little bridge, but the former poker-playing jurist of Uvalde, now grown into a good-looking, solid, substantial man in his early sixties, with gray hair, and healthy, ruddy face, finds all the amusement he needs playing bridge for the mere fun of it. There are no stakes in this Congressional game.

Often in the evening the Garners go for a walk through the White Lot. Both of them are movie fans, and take in all the good shows. Except on the rarest occasions the Speaker is in bed by 9:30 o'clock in the evening. He sleeps the sleep of a man who enjoys a clear conscience and rugged health.

Home for Summer

Every summer, when Congress adjourns, they go back to Uvalde, to the beautiful home surrounded by magnificent live oak trees which they have built there in the heart of the little town, in an orchard and garden of six acres.

The Speaker raises better sweet potatoes than anybody in the county, and he is proud of them. He has a fine vegetable garden. There are lots of roses, and fruit trees. The Speaker also takes great pride in his pecan grove.

The only son, Tully, who manages the family property in Uvalde, is now 35 years old. He married Miss Ann Fenner, of Texas, and they have one daughter, Genevieve, 9 years old, the Garners' only grandchild. She is the Speaker's pet, and is with him all the time when he is home, looking after his farms, ministering to the horses and cows and, upon occasion, feeding a litter of motherless kittens with a medicine dropper, while the small granddaughter stands by with clasped hands and a rapt expression on her face.

And there is another who is always mighty glad when Congress adjourns, and Jack comes home.

Mother Is Proud

His mother is as proud of him today as she was the day he left home, a boy, to make his place in the world.

When he had walked into the House of Representatives on December 7, in a brown suit and soft shirt, the same identical John N. Garner the House had known for 28 years, without even a new necktie to celebrate the event, and had taken the oath as second highest officer of the government, congratulations poured in upon him from all over the country.

But the man who had just become Speaker gave out to the newspaper correspondents only one of the messages.

It was from his 80-year-old mother, still living there at Detroit, in old Red River County, where he was born. It read:

"Am listening in with love and pride. You have made your mother's heart glad."

As she had said when she had first heard that her son would be elected to the American Speakership:

"It won't hurt John any, he's a good boy."

An old-fashioned mother. An old-fashioned son. He stood at last, in the high place to which he had been called the perfect embodiment of the old-fashioned American.

Government Principles

The colonial strain whence he had sprung in Virginia and Tennessee had given him a reverence for the teachings of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson. The founders and fathers of the republic were his guides and mentors.

From the inspiration of Washington he had taken to heart the solemn warning against foreign entanglements, and his thoughts, from earliest boyhood, turned inward, to his own country, and not outward to foreign lands. From Jefferson had come a profound respect for the fundamental truths of the Constitution. Jackson had given him sympathy for the common man.

The principles of government which he absorbed in his youth were drawn from the well-springs of ancient American tradition. As a member of the Legislature of Texas he concerned himself with the immediate duties before him. As a member of the Ways and Means Committee of the House he attended to the business of that committee, and did not seek to interfere with the business of other committees. As Speaker of the House he stood for the constitutional prerogatives of that body, and encroached not an inch upon those of the Senate. This attitude is habitual with him.

No Narrow Partisan

Probably no man in public life in recent years has had such wholesome respect for the basic principles of the Constitution. He perceived it to be an instrument of checks and balances. These he sought to maintain. He saw that the Constitution provided for a two-party system of government, the electoral college requiring a majority to elect a President. He became a party man, but no narrow partisan.

When President Hoover summoned him from Texas to discuss the proposed moratorium of the war debts, he took an airplane and went to Washington. But he declined to agree in advance to the President's proposal because he saw that the President's effort to commit members of the Senate and House to a legislative program, as individuals, was not in accord with the constitutional method.

He opposed the moratorium, not because he lacked sympathy with Europe, but because he was first of all an American, and put the interest of America first. For this reason he believed that the European war debts were honest debts, and that the American people should, and must, collect them. For the same reason he believed in maintaining always an adequate navy for the protection of the national interest.

These fundamental principles became a part of his mental equipment.

Cold in logic, firm in decision, warm in sympathy in all things concerning his country, his career grew to be inspirational, his story the story of a real American.

Wall Street Convinced Bond Market Now On Uptrend

The New York financial community is quite firmly convinced that the bond market has rounded the turn and is now definitely on the mend. Fixed interest bearing securities have been pushing persistently forward now for the better part of three weeks and with demand still asserting itself quite impressively the corporate list has approached within striking distance of the year's previous high levels. Traders close to the situation reported a much improved underlying condition with offerings light and potential buyers obliged to bid for such bonds as they desire. The improved situation in bonds needs no further explanation than the abrupt halt in Bank insolvencies in recent weeks, due to administration efforts.

Action of Gillette Safety Razor is interpreted by some close watchers as probably signalizing completion of the speculative operation which has been in progress in that issue. Market sponsorship of the issue has been in the hands of a prominent operator who is among those credited with having rolled up a fortune on the bear side over the last few years. Few stocks on the list have enjoyed the same measure of appreciation as Gillette, which around current levels is ruling at prices well over 100 per cent above the year's low of 10⅜, registered prior to the resumption of dividend payments several weeks ago.

Extension of the recovery movement in the bond market yesterday coincided with the heavy repayments by the British treasury and the Reichsbank on account of credits secured here last year. The British treasury went through with its previously announced program for liquidation of $150,000,000 of its $200,000,000 credit, while the repayment of 10 per cent of the $100,000,000 credit advanced to the Reich, brought $2,500,000 of the $10,000,000 so paid to the Federal Reserve. Funds received on the British credit will be distributed to 110 participating American banks and in prevailing circumstances it is believed a liberal portion of such balances will see profitable investment in bonds.

Traders are watching Washington for new developments to aid the banking and business situations. They are confident that additional moves will be made by the authorities which will be beneficial. Just what they will be is not being predicted as yet, but many of these operators have maintained a long position in recent sessions because of this expectation. A favorable development from Washington would have considerable influence on stock market sentiment of the traders who have been credited with doing the bulk of the business in recent sessions.

What is generally termed as "temporary" buying has been coming into the bond market, according to students. Investors who have had funds available have been picking up bonds until such time as they desire to accumulate common stocks. It is known that a number of firms have experienced a demand for bonds from clients who have expressed an intention of picking up common stocks later on. Rather than permit their funds to lie idle they have been purchasing bonds so that they are drawing interest.

While outside buying has been comparatively small for some time, commission houses report that customers who have taken long positions have exercised great care and discrimination in making buying selection. In contrast with 1929 the attitude of the public has changed substantially. At that time "street tips" were followed with purchases, whereas today buying recommendations from firms must be accompanied by the reason for the stocks mentioned being selected by the houses.

PRICES AFFECT JEWEL TEA GROSS

Profit Ratio Maintained At 9.9% by Cost Control And Expense Reductions

CHICAGO, March 5.—The 1932 outlook for Jewel Tea Company, Inc., indicates continuation of its relatively stable earnings, with a good possibility that profits might better the creditable showing of 1931. On the basis, and in view of the company's strong working capital position, there is reasonable assurance that the current regular dividend of $4 a share on the capital stock will be maintained this year.

The question of extra disbursements which have been paid in varying amounts in past years including 1931, depends upon excess earnings over the regular dividend rate which cannot, of course, be forecast.

COFFEE SALES GAIN

By trimming expenses last year more than 10 per cent below the 1930 level and by establishing more strict control over costs and inventories Jewel was able to maintain a high ratio of profits to sales of 9.9 per cent, notwithstanding a 11.5 per cent drop in net sales from 1930. However, three-fourths of the decline in sales was accounted for by lower prices. Tonnage volume of most products dropped somewhat in 1931 but coffee sales volume, which accounts for about half of company's total volume, increased 4 per cent.

EXPANSION PLANS

Jewel Tea proposes to expand its business only moderately this year while at the same time existing sales routes will be subjected to to concentrated development to bring up the weekly average sales of each unit. Sales for the four weeks ended January 30, 1932, were $899,926 or 15.6 per cent below sales of $1,066,913 in the like 1931 period, while average weekly sales of the 1,334 routes in operation during the first period of this year were $169 a route compared with $208 a route on 1,282 routes in the corresponding period last year. The drop in sales and average for each route is due mainly to the decline in prices of goods sold.

Market Is Obviously Trying to Do Better

International News Service.

NEW YORK, March 5.—The market is obviously trying to do better. Yesterday's dividend cut by General Electric caused no more than a momentary reaction and leaders were coming back well at the close. While the tape indicates higher prices, it would be well to wait and see if stocks can break out of their narrow trading range.

Runup in Lambert was accompanied by the story that the $8 dividend would be maintained on Monday. The stock is selling to yield about 16 per cent, which suggests a different story, though 1931 net covered the payment.

Better action of the rails followed reports that a constructive announcement on consolidation would be forthcoming from Washington soon.

Private advices from Detroit are that Ford is passing out big orders and that things are humming again.

* * *

The Chicago crowd is active in Borg Warner again. An important Wall Street figure is linked with the strength in Montgomery Ward. Better feeling about Drug followed completion of the last of forced selling the other day. The stock is said to harbor a sleeping short interest.

Strength in National Dairy is due to knowledge that net for last year was about $3.45 a share. Wall Street had been estimating $3.00.

STOCK MARKET OPENS FIRM, ADVANCES

Numerous Gains of 1 to 3 Appear on Trading of Only Moderate Volume

NEW YORK, March 5.—(AP.)—The stock market moved forward along a broad front in the early trading today.

The list opened with a firm tone, and gains of 1 to 3 points were numerous by the end of the first half hour. Trading was in moderate volume.

Peoples Gas was an exception losing more than 3 points. Gains of 2 to 3 points appeared in Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Drug, International Business Machines, Columbian Carbon and Air Reduction. Gains of a point or more appeared in United States Steel, American Telephone, Case and others.

The stock market community found little new incentive to make additional purchases as a result of overnight developments in the domestic field, but again the international exchange market contributed a measure of cheerfulness.

Reflecting further the new rush of capital to London and in lesser degree to New York, the pound sterling and the dollar advanced at the expense of the French franc, which until the past few weeks had held unchallenged sway. Sterling cables opened up ¾ cent to another 1932 new high price of $3.51⅛. French francs opened ⅛ point lower at 3.93½ cents.

The German Reichsbank's action in reducing its $100,000,000 credit by 10 per cent with its four central bank creditors was favorably received. Prior to the opening of the New York market, reports showed that German government bonds had advanced 1 point or more in European trading.

Informal reports of further negotiations designed to curtail copper production were also favorably received, although these were accepted with caution born out of past disappointments.

The weekly trade reviews were generally colorless in-so-far as actual evidences of business betterment were concerned, but again told of gradually reviving confidence.

RAILS LOANED HUGE SUM

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP.)—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation to date has loaned to the railroads of the country a total of $24,979,850.77 out of $83,973,081.79 drawn from the Treasury.

The largest of these loans, $7,500,000, was extended to the Southern Railway Company on March 2, for the payment of maturing principal installments of equipment trust obligations and toward meeting interest and rental requirements.

Presidents of the Burlington, Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads announced that their roads have not applied for loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and did not intend to do so this year.

President Ralph Budd, of the Burlington, saw encouraging promises of large grain movements as a result of well-soaked soil in Iowa and Nebraska.

The 1931 earnings also are after giving effect to adjustments (items received previously set up of $2,160,641), which are deducted from write-downs of $3,022,295 for adjustments of inventories, foreign exchange and securities, making net reduction of $1,471,654 for the year. ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

STEEL ORDERS TO EXPAND IN MARCH

Motor Industry Expected To Go Into Production Soon; Prices Now Firmer

By B. E. V. LUTY

Predictions are made with a show of confidence, apparently on good grounds, that steel demand will increase during the present month. By no means are such predictions based on any current trend, for it anything demand has decreased a trifle in the last couple weeks. Ingot production this week has been at about 25 per cent of present capacity or at about the January average and a point or so below October.

On the one hand there has been an absence of the usual seasonal increase since the first of the year, while on the other hand there has not been a decrease since October commensurate with the change in general business and financial conditions, and thus support is given to the idea of an "irreducible minimum" in steel demand having been reached or closely approached five months ago.

SENTIMENT IMPROVED

Expectations of increasing steel demand this month are based on several considerations. There must be some sort of influence by the weather, the opening of spring, particularly as there has been none in anticipation, buyers all down the line being so conservative and disposed to procrastinate. Stocks of wire products laid in at lower prices than those lately held, and very rigidly by the mills are exhausted, reports showing that jobbers and retailers have virtually no stocks. The automobile industry, which has held back so long, must very shortly get into production for such season as it is going to have. Sentiment in business and financial circles has been improving by reason of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Glass-Steagall act.

Efforts to stabilize of advance steel prices can have practically no influence upon steel buying for orders are not placed until the steel is absolutely required, while on the other hand the claims of sellers in the past that firm prices encourage demand would hardly be verified in times like these.

MORE SUCCESSFUL

The stabilization movement has become a success so far as it could be at so early a date when there has not been time for a full or crucial test. In the past week, so far as can be observed, all mills have adopted 1.60 cents, Pittsburgh, or 1.70 cents, Chicago, as their minimum quotation on bars, shapes and plates. Customers are supposed to be protected for the time being with the expectation that the new prices will actually rule on all shipments after this month. There is represented a return to the market prevailing for more than a year up to last December. In sheets the new prices have been quoted, nominally, for nearly a month, but old quotations have been recognized to such an extent that little buying has occurred at the new figures which are under prices early last year, also prices July to November. In strips prices are under prices at any time last year.

The movement was in essence an effort to arrest the declining tendency and to make up some of the recent declines rather than to put prices up to any material extent. There is no substantial, no more than technical ground for buyers to complain. The majority of buyers prefer a stable market as they have markets of their own in turn.

TRADE BODIES TO ADVERTISE

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP)—Millions of dollars in national newspaper advertising are expended yearly by trade associations in an organized effort to extend the markets for the products of their industries.

The trade association department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States points out that the amount spent annually in co-operative advertising has multiplied many times in the last 10 years. Co-operative advertising both in financial outlay and direct results is now one of the important functions of many trade organizations, it said.

Trade promotion plans for 1932 just announced by the National Electric Light Association call for the expenditure of more than $300,000 in national advertising, supplementing the large volume of local advertising by individual utility companies.

The Association of Hawaiian Pineapple Canners also has announced that it will resume national advertising. This association, it was said, was obliged to discontinue its earlier advertising campaign about three years ago because it proved so successful members were unable to meet demands.

Also the Window Shade Institute has just made public a new trade promotion service to its members consisting of newspaper advertisements, direct mail letters and folders. This particular campaign will be devoted exclusively to replacement business.

THOSE OPPOSED TO LIQUIDATION IN SADDLE

Recent Developments in U. S. and Great Britain Counter Deflationary

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Recent significant developments, especially in the United States and Great Britain, have been counter deflationary in character.

Those who are opposed to the reckless policy of letting liquidation take its course are now in the saddle.

Britain turned from deflation last fall by temporarily abandoning the gold standard. In a vastly stronger position America through the new construction program is seeking healthful credit expansion on a gold standard basis.

Mr. Rukeyser

John Maynard Keynes, British economist and chairman of the National Life Assurance Society, expressed satisfaction in London in the new credit policies of both countries. He said:

"Unless the really desperate situation in Central Europe upsets things, there is legitimate hope that the first steps in the direction of relieving the financial crisis have been taken, but it is unthinkable that we can step straight from the financial crisis to relief of the industrial crisis without the cheap money phase intervening."

Incidentally, Mr. Keynes, war time adviser to the British treasury, is waging a campaign to induce the British to see to stage a comeback in international lending, not wishing to see New York become the permanent heir to London's financial prestige.

QUOTA SYSTEM

It has been proposed that temporarily we substitute for our tariff policy, which is being interfered with by depreciation of foreign currencies, the French system of quotas for imports.

Secondly, it has been suggested that a central mind, like Fred I. Kent, director of the Bankers' Trust Company, who took charge of a similar situation during the war, should each day draw up a consolidated balance sheet of the foreign exchange position of this financial center. Then sudden foreign demands could be met in orderly manner instead of chaotic fashion. Instead of leaving the situation to chance, such a voluntary agency could distribute sudden loads on a consortium of strong American banks.

Another proposal is that in anticipation of foreign withdrawals American bankers should now quietly create offsetting foreign balances in Paris, London and elsewhere through the sale of acceptances in those markets. The real question is whether the New York bankers have enough co-operative capacity to organize to meet contingencies without having first had to experience the pressure of events.

Insull Shows Weakness Of Holding Companies

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE DIFFICULTIES FACING the Insull Investment companies, which have been outlined in this column in previous articles, indicate the fundamental weakness of the great pyramids of holding companies and investment companies built up during boom times to permit a few groups to secure control of a major share of the utility properties in this country through the use of the investing public's money.

Insull Utility Investments, Inc., and Corporation Securities Company, of Chicago, have suffered to a greater extent than the majority of similar organizations. Only the amazing stability of the electric power business and of the earnings of organizations in this field has prevented a great number of utility holding and investment companies from finding themselves in positions of utter insolvency.

The great utility groups have been built like houses of cards. Only a minor disturbance to the key pieces is necessary to make the entire structure collapse.

Capital Set Ups Involved

THE COMPLEX NATURE of the capital structures of organizations in the utility field make it difficult for the average person to follow the effects of a change in business conditions such as has taken place in the past three years. The problem can be simplified by taking a theoretical company.

Let us assume that a group desires to get control of several power companies. To do this it will be necessary to invest about $20,000,000 in the stocks of these organizations. To finance the deal $10,000,000 of bonds are sold to the public, $5,000,000 of preferred stock and the group keeps for itself a majority of $5,000,000 of common stock. In actual practice during 1928 and 1929 many such companies were formed in which the controlling common stock did not represent the investment of any real money.

After its formation this investment company finds that there are other properties it wants. To get these stocks $10,000,000 more is borrowed from banks. Stocks held are put up as collateral for the loans. Before the bank loans can be retired by the sale of new securities to the public, a business depression starts. The value of the securities in the underlying companies steadily shrinks. If the value of the stocks held is cut in half the company's assets amount to only $15,000,000. After deducting banks loans only $5,000,000 is left for holders of $10,000,000 of bonds and there are no assets available for preferred or common stockholders. If the shrinkage carries the value of stocks held down to one-third of the original price there is no equity for any of the holders of the investment companies securities. A shrinkage in earnings of underlying companies will have a corresponding effect on income available for interest and dividends on the investment company's securities.

Leverage Important Factor

THE MAGNIFIED EFFECT of rises or falls in stock prices and earnings on holding companies is known as leverage. The more investment and holding companies there are pyramided on each other the greater is the effect of a rise or fall in the earnings or stock prices of underlying organizations. If the value of the stocks held by our theoretical company had doubled instead of being cut in half, the entire gain of $30,000,000 would have benefited the holders of the $5,000,000 of common stock.

Leverage will be an important factor to speculators when the next bull market gets under way. Just as it has vastly increased the fall in the prices of holding and investment company securities, it will greatly increase the rapidity of a rise in prices during a bull market.

The conservative investor should avoid the securities of pyramided structures because of the risks they represent. The investor should seek the securities of the actual operating properties so that he can be first in line for his interest or dividends. For the speculator, however, the securities or organizations at the top of pyramids will hold an especial lure. When and if business improves and the market turns upward, the greatest enhancement in prices will take place in stocks of holding companies.

RETAIL SALES LOWER HERE

Retail sales in this district for the month of February are estimated by R. G. Dun & Co. to have been 25 per cent lower than in February, 1931, considerable of this decrease being due to lower prices of merchandise.

The volume of sales of wholesalers is estimated to have been about 30 per cent lower in February, 1932, than in February, 1931. Buying in such lines as drygoods and men's and women's wearing apparel continues of the hand-to-mouth variety, and such sales as made are principally of the cheaper grades.

It is generally reported that stocks in the hands of merchants are comparatively small and a moderate increase in the sales of retailers would doubtless result in an increase of demand from wholesalers. There has been a somewhat better movement of seasonable hardware and farm and garden implements, helped by the springlike weather. Grocers report a fair demand although prices are much lower than a year ago, and meat products are selling at the lowest rate for many years, so that the cash value of trade is much below normal.

Slowness still predominates in collections in this district with both wholesalers and retailers.

Metal Membership Price Unchanged

NEW YORK, March 5.—Arrangements have been made for the sale of a National Metal Exchange membership for $1,000 which price is unchanged from the last previous transaction.

WINDOW GLASS ORDERS UP

Orders for window glass increased sharply during the week as compared with the average of the previous eight weeks, according to American Glass Review. This was due entirely to the new prices announced by manufacturers who also will discontinue production of off-qualities. Virtually all manufacturers issued new lists. Each differed more or less from the changed prices announced first by the American Window Glass Company, which advanced quotations an average of about 10 per cent on "A" and "B" grades.

While manufacturers were cheered by the upturn in business resulting from the new conditions they announced, there was doubt as to whether the improved market would persist. It is known that stocks have been at the "starvation" level for some time and much of the new business of the week was due to the desire of distributors and large users, like sash and door manufacturers, to get their stocks into better shape. Announcement of a price change upward by all manufacturers has a tendency to solidify market conditions and to bring out orders contemplated.

SALES RALLY PLANNED BY FRIGIDAIRE

Beichler Sees Continued Progress for Electric Refrigeration in 1932

One of the most ambitious programs ever undertaken by the Frigidaire Corporation, designed to make 1932 a better business year than 1931, will be launched here March 7, when all sales representatives of that electric refrigerator manufacturer in this section gather at the William Penn Hotel.

Mr. Nance

This meeting is part of a national program to improve business for this company, which last year reported that it built 35 per cent more household electric refrigerators than in 1930. Thirty-nine such meetings will be held in key cities of the country this month, and the entire national sales organization of the company, numbering 15,000, will attend them.

SEES SALES GAIN

E. G. Biechler, president and general manager of Frigidaire Corporation, in announcing the conference to the local representative, A. H. Hattenbach, president of Suburban Electric Development Company, said:

Mr. Riehle

"All indications point to continued progress in the electric refrigeration industry during 1932. Each year has been a better one for our industry and 1931 was the best with its sales of nearly 1,000,000 household electric refrigerators. The thrift-mindedness of the public played an important part in the sales increase last year and will have an even greater influence this year."

NEW MODELS OUT

A group of factory officials, headed by J. J. Nance, manager of the sales planning division, Dayton, O., will come here for the meeting. F. L. Riehle, who directs all frigidaire sales activity in this part of the country, will conduct the local sales conference.

Two new lines of products have been introduced for this year. Merchandising and advertising plans concerning these will be reviewed at the sessions. The new products include three low-priced electric refrigerators known as the Frigidaire-Moraine models, and small, unit-type air conditioning products for cooling, heating and conditioning of the air in homes, offices, commercial establishments and institutions.

Suez Canal Traffic Reported Lower

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP)—Traffic passing through the Suez Canal during 1931 decreased both in tonnage and in the number of units traversing the canal as compared with the previous year's movement.

Information received at the Commerce Department said 5,366 vessels with a net tonnage of 30,028,119 passed through the canal during the year, representing a decline of 395 vessels from 1930, and a diminution of 1,640,640 net tons.

By James J. Long

Ruth Changes His Style. Swinging Lighter Bat. Panther Athletes Busy.

Ferrell After 250 Wins. Nour Aims at Pladner. Vault Mark in Danger.

BABE ADDS TO WORRIES OF PITCHERS

NEWS THAT WILL hardly bring any loud cheers from the American League pitching sector has trickled out of St. Petersburg. As if he had not been doing enough to make life a burden to the unfortunate flingers who have to face him from day to day during the season, Babe Ruth is tuning up in the Yankees' Florida training camp with a flock of new bats of a changed model and has altered his hitting stance in a fashion which he thinks will improve his batting average and home run total as well.

Babe Ruth

The new model of bat that the Bambino is swinging this year weighs only 38 ounces. That spells quite a departure from Ruthian fashions of the past, as the clubs he used to swing weighed 54 ounces. His present type of bludgeon has an unpolished natural wood handle, with a boned and varnished business end. He says he made the shift to meet changed conditions resulting from the introduction of a new ball last year and the difference in pitching that followed the raising of the stitches.

IN HIS NEW stance at the plate, Ruth stands with his feet not quite so far apart as in the past. Also he has changed the position of his hands on the bat and now grips the club a little farther away from the end than has been his custom.

"I tried it out on the Coast when I played in some games there last fall," Babe explained, "and I found I could hit a ball just as far and also harder. So I decided to give the change in style a thorough test this spring. Up to date I am quite satisfied with the results, but I'll not say at this time that I am convinced it will help me. It will take time to prove that."

TWO TRIPLE-HEADERS in five days is the schedule ahead of Pitt's athletes for next week. The shifting of the Pitt-Carnegie boxing meet to the Stadium pavilion, to be run off in conjunction with the Pitt-Penn State varsity and freshman basketball games, makes this necessary.

The Panthers will be in Morgantown Tuesday and will not have an easy time there, as the West Virginians are out to get revenge for the triple defeat suffered here on January 30. Neither the basketball nor the boxing team at Pitt is in any too good condition, both feeling the effects of an overdose of schedule.

THE PANTHERS' BASKETBALL slate was probably the most difficult ever tackled by a college quintet, and when the limited experience of the Pitt boxers is considered, the ordeal that forced them to meet such glove teams as West Virginia, Temple, Syracuse, Carnegie, Penn State and Army in their first year of competition ranks second to none in the country in toughness. Right now, Joe Orsini, hard-working Pitt coach, is without the two men who, at the start of the season, were rated as his mainstays. Harry Conti, 125-pounder, is out with a broken hand, and Jack Schricker, 155-pounder and probably the best bit of raw material on the team, is trying to get back in shape after losing weight and speed through a severe cold.*

Wesley Ferrell

WESLEY FERRELL, Cleveland pitching ace, has set for himself a goal of 250 victories in the major leagues, and estimates that he ought to earn $250,000 before his hurling career is ended, even in these times when salaries have taken a downward trend.

This would indicate that Ferrell rates each victory he scores as worth $1,000. In his three years with the Indians, he has turned in 68 wins against 35 defeats, so that even if he is able to average 20 triumphs to a campaign he will have to keep going for nine seasons more to reach the mark at which he is aiming. It is not improbable that he will last that long, as he has just turned his twenty-fourth milestone.

BESIDES HAVING YOUTH in his favor, Ferrell realizes to a greater extent than the average pitcher the value of his arm. He is a stickler for condition and strict training, and reports from the Indian camp in New Orleans say that none of the great flingers of the past ever took better care of his salary whip.

Wes always does his warming up in the box. Sam Murphy observes, refuses to cut loose with curves or anything like his full speed, uses his left arm to make throws from the outfield when shagging flies, won't go on the diamond without a sweat shirt and won't go out at night without a topcoat.

TOM O'ROURKE, veteran boxing manager, believes he has a coming champion in his latest protege, Frankie Nour, Rumanian flyweight. According to O'Rourke, Nour has lost only one decision in 100 fights, that to a bantamweight, and in his last bout of importance scored four knockdowns against Young Perez, the boy who knocked out Frankie Genaro in two rounds. Tom brought Nour to this country to fight Midget Wolgast for the flyweight title, and says a New York club promised him the match, but Wolgast is in Honolulu for three bouts, and in the meantime O'Rourke would like to send the Rumanian against Emile (Spider) Pladner, French bantamweight, who will be seen at Motor Square Garden here Monday night against Jimmy Thomas.*

BASEBALL MEN CLOSE to Sydney Weil did not have to wait for the latter's denial to be convinced there was no foundation to the rumor that the Cincinnati club would be sold to Ty Cobb. They say that if anybody gets the Reds it will be Norman Perry, owner of the Indianapolis club.

As for Cobb, his friends deny that he is in the market as a prospective purchaser. Ty would like to get back in the big show as adviser to some club, it is said, but is not going to put any of his own money into a baseball proposition.

THE WINNER OF the recent bout between Lee Ramage and Ace Hudkins was to have been matched with Steve Hamas in Los Angeles, but the manager of the victorious Ramage decided Lee wasn't ripe for a meeting with the former Penn State man.

Los Angeles promoters did not press the matter. They lost money on the Hamas-Emanuel show, though it drew $9,466. The explanation is that they had to pay Hamas 50 and Emanuel 20 per cent, or a total of 70, and successful promotion must be figured on a basis of 50 to 55 per cent, generally speaking.

Bill Graber

THERE IS ONE world record holder who expects to see his own mark beaten this year and his place as the leader at his specialty taken by a rival. He is Lee Barnes, pole vaulter. Barnes holds the world record of 14 feet 1½ inches, but he thinks it is going to be topped the coming summer by Bill Graber, who succeeded him on the track team of the University of Southern California. As a sophomore last year, Graber won the I. C. 4-A championship with a spectacular vault of 14 feet ½ inch, just one inch below the record, and he is improving so steadily as to make Barnes predict that, if he maintains his interest he will not only win that event for the United States in the Olympic games but will vault at least 14 feet 6 inches for a new world mark. Graber has a better build than Barnes for a vaulter, as he is rangier.*

TECH CARRIES FIGHT TO BLUFFMEN

By JESS CARVER

The Carnegie Tech-Duquesne basketball series wound up in a perfect stand-off Carnegie's court forces defeated the Dukes in the Tartan gymnasium last night 29-24 in the second clash of the campaign between the two institutions. The outcome of last night's ball game came as somewhat of a surprise, as the Dukes had walloped the Tartans, 29-14, on the occasion of their first meeting.

However, they do not pay off on past performances yet, even in basketball, and the Skibos, alert and smart, outplayed and outclassed the Bluffites last night. It was the final game of the season for Duquesne, and the second successive and sixth defeat in 20 starts for Chick Davies' hopefuls. Monday night, at Beaver Falls, Geneva became the first tri-state district team to take the measure of the locals.

MACDOUGAL IN ACTION

There were two outstanding features to last night's ball game. The first was the way in which the Skibos carried the old fight to the Dukes, and the second, the appearance in uniform and in all of the second half action of Jim MacDougal, the big forward star, who was announced by the Duquesne authorities as being through for the remainder of the season, due to a fracture of a bone in an ankle. MacDougal played pretty fair ball that second half, limped only slightly and dumped in two field goals.

Lou Jagnow and Bob Smith, Tech's crack forward pair, came through like nobody's business, especially the business of the Dukers. They led the attack of the plaid, Smith with five field goals and two fouls and Jagnow with five goals. For Duquesne, Dudey Moore, hero of the first encounter and in the way matter of critical opinion, the hero of the season for the Red and Blue, dumped three for Duquesne.

At the half, Duquesne trailed by a point at 12-11, after having taken the lead at 4-3, 6-5, 8-7 and 11-9 previous. Capt. Bunk McGeever's goal gave his team the final advantage, which was the last time the Irish were out in front.

TECH OFFENSE STRONG

You should have seen those Tartans go in that second half. They boosted their one point lead to no fewer than six on two occasions, successfully fought off the most desperate and best-laid challenges of the Dukes and stuck in there to make their triumph only a shade less impressive and decisive than was the one registered by the boys of the Bluff a month or so back.

A bulwark of excessive strength on the defensive, and no small factor in the offensive maneuvers of his team was Red Fergus, Tech's crackerjack guard. The carrot-top scored a field goal and two fouls and several bon-mots of defensive play that brought tears of chagrin to Duquesne supporters.

In the preliminary, the Duquesne freshmen partially, even although prematurely, atoned for the defeat of the varsity by walloping Tech's Plebes, 45 to 17. The lineups:

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YE[illegible] DAY: ONE-ARMED PAPER-HANGER WITH HIVES—I have discovered a "one-armed paper-hanger with the hives" in the person of John Annis, who is 75 and an inhabitant of White River, Vt. To my surprise, Annis proved a living refutation of the well-known phrase in the sereness and leisure of his manner. THE TIME-ANNOUNCING CANINES—The wild dogs of the Frozen North of Siberia seem to possess a most curious sense of [illegible]. Twice a day, at the stroke of 6 a. m. and 9 p. m. they receive themselves of a howl-like series of sounds which last about a minute and are reputed to be so regular and reliable that the natives often set their timepieces by them. Otto W. Lowe, of Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., a traveler to Ochotsk, Siberia, is the authority for this statement, adding that the natives accept this phenomenon as a matter of course and place implicit trust in its regularity.

SQUASH FINAL CARDED TODAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Week-end squash racquets combat of signal moment impends today as district Class A and Class B stars await to campaign climax-action on the Keystone Athletic Club courts. Heading the Saturday bill, Chip Kennedy, cagy K. A. C. flash, battles George Kepler, Jr., youthful P. A. A. smasher, in final tussle for City B honors at 2 p. m. Following the secondary group title fracas, hand-picked warriors of the five organizations composing the Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association inaugurate hostilities in the annual City A championship event, billed to run throughout the coming week.

The Kennedy-Kepler contest marks wind-up of the first attempt to stage formal tourney action for Class B performers here. The outcome looms as rather a toss-up, the power, consistency, and change of pace of the clever Keystoner being pitted against the terrific severity and deft corner game of the Winged Head favorite.

Meanwhile semi-finalists of the B affair—Kennedy, Kepler, Capt. Fred McMahon and Alex Robinson—have been granted opportunity to compete in the A debating. This afternoon's upped sector card calls for three matches, all apt to prove warm ones.

Bill Bickel, Keystone ace, opens with Capt. McMahon, hard-hitting P. A. A. delegate, after which Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, prime Winged Head hope, will resume play after a fortnight's illness by taking on husky Don McCutcheon, home club luminary. Dr. Whitey Stegeman, third P. A. A. entrant, collaborates with Alex Robinson, Allegheny Country Club crack, in terminating the program. Frank McClintock, University Club premier, and McCook Reed, Pittsburgh Golf Club satellite, have drawn byes into bracket two.

ALLEGHENY FIVE TAKES LEAD

By JULIUS LEVIN

Allegheny High School, champion of Section II, drew first blood in the City League series, and East Pike Run, champion of Section XVI, and New Castle, champion of Section III, advanced to the quarter-finals of the W. P. I. A. L. eliminations, in the championship scholastic games played yesterday.

Allegheny took the lead in the City League series by defeating Schenley, 22-20, in the opening battle of the City League series at the Pitt Stadium Pavilion, while East Pike Run, Joe Guerra's champions, upset the dope in the W. P. I. A. L. series by defeating Canonsburg, 28-16. New Castle advanced a notch in the W. P. I. A. L. series by defeating Zelienople, 33-12.

CANONSBURG BEATEN

As a result of their victories, Allegheny can clinch the City League championship Tuesday night when it plays Schenley in the second contest of the City League series in the Pitt Stadium Pavilion; East Pike Run earns the right to engage the New Kensington-Sewickley Township winner on March 11, while New Castle qualifies to meet the winner of the Uniontown-Braddock setto on March 15, in the closing battle of the quarter-finals.

The only upset of the three contests was East Pike Run's triumph over Canonsburg. New Castle and Allegheny were pregame favorites, while Canonsburg was figured to beat East Pike Run.

Allegheny, Coach Springer's Section II champions, just barely managed to score a victory over Walter Gross' passers despite the fact they got away to a 11-0 lead before Schenley succeeded in scoring a point. The first period saw Allegheny on the long end of a 14-1 score.

Schenley struck its real stride in the second period and really outclassed the North Siders during the remainder of the game.

Trailing by 13 points at the end of the first period, Schenley managed to get the range of the basket and started to ring up points with surprising regularity. As a result, the Grossmen pulled up to within two points of the Section II champs. The attack of the North Siders, which caught the Schenleyites by surprise in the opening stanza, was completely bottled up by the Schenley defense in the last three quarters, and the Allegheny quintet was held to eight points, while Schenley was registering 19.

HYATT CHECKED

The first period advantage, however, was too much for Schenley to overcome and the North

Pitt-Tech Boxing Meet Is Shifted To Stadium

The Pitt-Tech boxing meet carded for the Tech gymnasium next Saturday has been shifted to the Pitt Stadium pavilion, where it will be put on in conjunction with the Pitt-Penn State varsity and freshmen basketball games.

For a while it was thought that the meet would be called off altogether, the rugged Pitt schedule having taken its toll of the Panthers, and the Tartans being handicapped by sickness and ineligibility.

Appleby, Collins In Cue Title Tilt

FRENCH LICK, Ind., March 5.—(AP.)—Edgar T. Appleby, of New York, defending champion, and Percy N. Collins, of Chicago, are tied for the lead in the National Amateur 18.2 balkline billiards championship and will meet this afternoon to decide the title.

PITT TEAMS SEE ACTION

Pitt's varsity basketball, boxing and swimming teams have more or less action on hand for this afternoon and evening.

The Panther splashers engage Franklin and Marshall in a dual meet in the Trees gymnasium pool this afternoon. Tonight, the basketballers, varsity and freshmen, play Penn State at State College, while Joe Orsini's boxers engage the scrappers of the United States Military Academy, at West Point, here in the Pitt Stadium Pavilion.

In other intercollegiate court tussles booked for tonight in the district, West Virginia and Wash-Jeff meet at Morgantown and Thiel and Waynesburg go in a Tri-State Conference game at Waynesburg.

The Pitt boxers face the Cadet punchers more or less handicapped. Pitt will be without the services of hitting ability of Conti, who is on the shelf for the remainder of the season with a broken hand. West Point's boxers boast a fine record, superior and more impressive than that of the Panthers, and are favored to win tonight's duel. The lineup of matches follows:

125-pound class—Namiz, Pitt vs. Cleveland, Army.
135-pound class—Schempe, Pitt, vs. Green, Army; Martin, Pitt vs. Knaier, Army.
145-pound class—Rubbo, Pitt, vs. Hagan, Army.
155-pound class—Schricker, Pitt, vs. Clark, Army.
165-pound class—Shotwell, Pitt, vs. Anoseinia, Army; Reigel, Pitt, vs. Dixon, Army.

McDermott, of the Pittsburgh Lyceum, will referee. The judges will be Lt. Theodenick C. A. C., U. S. A. and Dr. Roscoe (Skip) Gougler, Pitt.

CAMPBELL CUE VICTOR

Dale Campbell won the Greater Pittsburgh Three-Cushion Billiard League title by defeating Joe Wirebach, 50 to 47, in their final match at Tobin's parlors last night.

MINNESOTA CHAMP

ANN ARBOR, Mich., March 5.—University of Minnesota clinched the Big Ten Conference hockey title last night when its sextet played a 1-to-1 two overtime period tie with the Michigan Wolverines.

LAST NIGHT'S RESULTS
Chicago 6, N. Y. Americans 1.

BUFFALO, March 5. — The Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets will present an altered lineup when they make their last appearance of the International Hockey League season against the Buffalo Bisons on the latters home ice at Fort Erie, Ont., tonight.

Stu Dunning, Pittsburgh right wing, is ineligible to participate in tonight's fray as a result of his having suffered his third major penalty at Pittsburgh Thursday night, when the local skaters defeated the Jackets in an overtime battle. Coach Charley Reid today said that Tex White would appear in Dunning's position.

LOCKING ON SHELF

The Pittsburgh coach further announced that Norman Locking probably will be benched in favor of Pat Shea, sturdy Irishman who can perform either on the front line or in the backfield. This means that Center Ty Arbour will be flanked by new wings. No changes are to be made in the battle array of the visitors' defense or other forward trios.

Coach Frank Nighbor has announced that no changes will be made in the Buffalo lineup.

The Yellow Jackets gained a tie in an overtime game on the occasion of their last appearance here. The Pittsburghers are making a determined effort to fight their way into the annual title playoff series, and another fast, close game is anticipated.

The fray here marks the Jackets' first stop on their last road trip of the season. From here they will go to Syracuse, Windsor and London for games before returning home.

FIRST BATTLE PLEASES GIBBY

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 5.—The performance of both his Regular and Yanigan nines in their first contest of the season, which was played yesterday, was highly pleasing to Manager Gibson.

The rival nines, and they certainly act like bitter rivals, both managed to garner seven hits. The Regulars, however, were fortunate to hit with men on bases, and thus managed to cop the decision by the score of 7 to 4.

Gibson allowed Johnny Niggeling and Johnny Bivins, recruit hurlers, to remain on the mound during the entire six innings of the first encounter. Niggeling was, for the most part, master of the Yans, although they did bunch four hits and an error in the fifth inning to score all their runs.

Bivins, after the first two innings, in which he was pounded for six hits, silenced the bats of the Regulars and for the last four frames they nicked him for only one bingle.

Floyd Vaughn, promising recruit shortstop, displayed pleasing form in his intial appearance, handling four chances, two of them of the rather difficult type, without an error, and pounded out two hits, both singles.

The fielding on both teams was of high caliber. Comorosky and Rice had the only wobbles, Commy dropping Rice's fly after he had ran back to the fence, deep in left field, while Rice lost Commy's fly in the sun and dropped it.

The teams will meet in the second encounter this afternoon, while tomorrow afternoon the Buccaneers tangle with a team composed of National League stars in a game arranged by the local Chamber of Commerce. Yesterday's score:

BOXING 'WAR' CUTS PRICES

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

The local boxing "war" is on. It was bound to come with too many clubs and not enough gate receipts to support all of them.

Promoter Eddie Kapphan declared hostilities this morning when he announced that he would cut his prices from $1 and $2 to 50 cents and $1 for his shows in the Arena in Addison street beginning with next Friday night's card, which will feature Charley Baxter, of McKees Rocks, and Benny McArthur, of McKeesport, in the 10-round main bout. He will have 1,200 seats available at 50 cents, the smallest admission fee for a professional mitt show in Pittsburgh in many years.

Kapphan tested out the plan last night by issuing a number of tickets which, presented at the box office with 50 cents, entitled the bearer to a $1 seat. Satisfied with the results, he declared the new low scale in effect and hopes to fill his arena for the first time with next week's card.

MOOSE GRABS BOUT

The city's newest promoter was moved not a little in his decision by the fact that Motor Square Garden interests were permitted to grab the Moose Temple after Apples Meyers quit there a few weeks ago and will run shows on Wednesday nights beginning next week, when Mose Butch and Jackie Wilson will box the 10-round main bout. He claims the Garden is trying to tie up all of the available talent between the two clubs and that Butch originally promised to meet the winner of a Willie Davies-Jackie Wilson bout at his club and then accepted an offer from Jules Beck, the Moose promoter, who also is the matchmaker at the Garden.

With the Garden close to a monopoly on boxing here with its two clubs, Kapphan decided the best way to protect himself in the clinches was to cut the prices and put the shows within the reach of all of the fans. If he succeeds in attracting them the other clubs will have to fall in line or play to the empty seats that have been his lot in his new club so far. All around, it looks like the best break the cash customers have received in a long time, for many of the shows here have not been worth the prices charged.

HOLT BEATS LYLE

Billy Holt, of Homewood local Negro welterweight champion, handily defeated Ray Lyle, Akron blond, in the windup of Kapphan's show last night, although he conceded the visitor an advantage of eight pounds in weight at 146 pounds against 154. The bout was decided by Referee Al Grayber's decision, one of the judges voting for a draw.

Joey Thomas, local featherweight, bested Dandy Allen, Negro, of Philadelphia and the Hill, in the first 10-rounder, in which Allen failed to do enough aggressive work to make matters interesting.

Johnny Cataline, of Charleston, defeated Sammy Paris of the Hill in the best bout of the card, and Fritzie Zivic won by a technical knockout when the referee stopped his bout in the fourth round to save Elmer Kozak, of Turtle Creek, from further punishment.

Between Rounds

Frank Novak, North Side heavyweight, and his manager, Cy Bethel, are on the parting of the ways. Bill Armstrong probably will be their contract, which has eight years to run.

Ronny Buntarh is making plenty of fuss over his new heavyweight, Leo Clements, of Jeannette, who stopped Jerry Rast in the first round at the Garden last Monday night. Leo will be seen in more bouts around here shortly.

Gorilla Jones, Negro middleweight, who is recognized by the N. B. A. as the champion of the world, will box Marcel Thil, the champion challenger, for the title in Paris some time between May 1 and 15.

Al Nelson, Erie Negro middleweight, is matched to box Jeff Hayes, of Akron, in the semi-final bout of the show at the Duquesne Monday night and should be well tested. The bout makes a corking preliminary for the two 10-rounders, bringing together Jimmy Thomas and Spider Pladner, the French bantamweight champion, and Battling Flores and Eddie Lord.

Vince Thunder boxes Billy Angelo and Mace Hamlin meets Eddie Cool in two 10-round bouts at the Arena in Philadelphia tonight.

Jimmy Bronson, famous boxing manager, will referee the Pitt-West Virginia bouts at Morgantown, W. Va., next Tuesday night. Jimmy succeeded Gene Tunney in both of his bouts with Jack Dempsey.

SWIM MARK FALLS

EVANSTON, Ill., March 5.—(AP)—Johnny Schneller of Michigan, last night bettered the intercollegiate swimming record for the 220-yard free style as the Wolverines defeated Northwestern, 44 to 31, in a duel meet. Schneller turned in 2:15.1 to better the accepted mark of 2:16 set by Osborne of Yale last year.

FIELDS OUTPOINTED

BOSTON, March 5.—(AP)—The line that pursues ring champions in Boston, last night fell on Jackie Fields, recrowned welterweight titleholder, for the second time in three years, and he was decisively outpointed by Johnny Indrisano, a clever homebred, in the Boston Garden's 10-round nontitle feature.

CATHOLIC PLAY IN SEMI-FINALS

Johnstown Catholic and North Catholic of Philadelphia; Central Catholic, of Pittsburgh, and St. Thomas, of Scranton, clash in semi-final games in the third annual state Catholic high school basketball tournament at Duquesne University this afternoon. The title will be decided in the Dukes gymnasium tonight. The Duke Preps won last year's tourney.

Yesterday Johnstown galloped through to an easy triumph over Holy Name High, of Duquesne 34-15, and North Catholic defeated St. Catherine's, of Dubois, by a great second-half attack, 40-31. Central High downed St. Joseph's, of Ashland, Pa., 32 to 20, and St. Thomas eliminated St. Stanislaus, of Erie, 25 to 10.

Johnstown and Philadelphia are booked to meet in the first game this afternoon, with Central and St. Thomas following. The Philadelphia team exhibited real class in defeating the Dubois entry yesterday, after being held even at 14-all in the first half of the game.

Central, the only Pittsburgh team in the tourney, played fine ball to score its first-round victory and is conceded a fine chance to gain the final round, with North Philadelphia favored as its opponent. Yesterday's lineups:

LISTENING IN

With the Radio Editor

GRACE MOORE, young American soprano, who rose from musical comedy to the operatic heights, sings the title role in Jules Massenet's "Manon" heard over WCAE this afternoon from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York. Miss Moore heads a distinguished cast, which includes Beniamino Gigli and Giuseppe De Luca. Based upon Abbe Prevost's famous novel, the opera relates the unhappy love affair of the unsophisticated and impressionable Manon, a French girl, whose misfortunes lead to her death while she is being exiled to America. Today marks the first time Miss Moore has been heard in the NBC-Metropolitan Opera series.

Miss Moore

Congressman Fiorello H. LaGuardia, fiery anti-dry New York Republican, and Congressman Thomas Blanton, fervid Texas Democratic prohibitionist, clash in a "catch-as-catch-can" debate on the resolution now before the House to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, at 10 tonight on WJAS. All complimentary salutations of debating procedure are dispensed with, and the network is expected to sizzle with biting oratory.

Music by the Welsh Choir and community singing of a high order feature KQV's broadcast at 8:30 tonight of the St. David's Day banquet. It is being held by the American Gorsedd and the Women's Welsh Clubs. Assistant United States Attorney General Roy St. Lewis is the speaker.

Marie Dressler May Make Mary Roberts Rinehart Story After All

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, by King Features Syndicate)

HOLLYWOOD, March 6.

Hope being eternal in the movie business, as elsewhere, M. G. M. will have another try at the "Tish" stories for Marie Dressler. The new treatment will be prepared by Joe Steele, magazine writer and former publicity man for Dick Barthelmess.

For some reason, the popular Mary Roberts Rinehart series has balked efforts at filming. A half dozen writers have made treatments, but none satisfactory. Through it all, however, the studio has retained its enthusiasm for Tish as a Marie Dressler character, and hope is held out that now she may reach the screen at last.

Marie Dressler

In the meanwhile, Marie continues to rest at home, seeing as few people as possible. Friends insist she is not ill, but conserving her strength. Her immediate screen vehicle is "Prosperity."

AND SO TO GOSSIP

George Brent, the new Warner palpitator, doesn't go in for Hollywood social life. Being unused to the bright lights of the sets, he's having a little trouble with his eyes. It's only a matter of acclimatization, however. This young actor is attracting plenty of attention in Hollywood. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer wanted him to play in the Garbo picture . . . Leo Carrillo, the actor, is the latest to promise a book on Hollywood. It's to be called "The Carnival of Papier-Mache." Says Leo: "I'll write about the bolognev, the posing and the make-believe out here." Between pictures, this energetic actor works with pick and shovel on his ranch . . . With her big house rented to the Martin Flavins, Colleen Moore is staying at her mother's. She promises the groom will fly out for the opening of her play . . . Dick Barthelmess sails from Singapore, March 7, for Venice. After that, it will be Rome, Paris and New York . . . Sammie Fuller, office boy for Herbert Brenon, got an idea for a story. He jotted down a synopsis and sent it to an Eastern publisher. To his amazement, a wire came asking for the manuscript. He wrote it, 320 pages, and it's on its way. It's about tabloids . . . Bill Boyd is going to Agua Caliente to play golf while Dorothy Sebastian works in a picture.

Mr. Barthelmess

ABOUT CHARLIE

As it looks now, Charlie Chaplin will be returning here in the not-too-distant future. He has been shipping things home for his Beverly Hills house and has given orders that other things be purchased. He also has taken another option on a cabin cruiser for the month of June. Before his homecoming, however, he may go to Japan, where he is very popular. Charlie's fan mail is down to about 25 per cent of normal, but he still gets hundreds of letters. And Al Reeve would have you believe that "City Lights" brought Charlie more money than any other picture he ever made, including the previous high-scorer, "The Gold Rush."

Thrill Film In Davis

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

For the satisfying thrill of seeing on the screen a new face that is backed by the personality and acting ability to create friends among movie fans, plus the thrill of exciting mystery entertainment, "The Silent Witness" is recommended. It opened in the Davis yesterday and will be a three-day feature in the Enright beginning today.

The face is that of Lionel Atwill, a Belasco star on Broadway a few years back, who does such excellent work in "The Silent Witness" that it seems certain he will rapidly make his way on the screen to the same position he has held on the stage.

He plays the role of the father of a boy, who admits to him that he has killed a gold-digger. Complications come when the father, himself, is accused of the slaying. The audience knows what has taken place, having seen the crime at the beginning of the story, but developments are gripping and surprising, even though they are somewhat of a strain upon credulity. No matter, it makes good entertainment of its kind.

Bramwell Fletcher, as the boy, and Greta Nissen, as the siren, whose work is shown principally in flash-backs, are most capably prominent. Helen Mack adds the romantic touch.

Plays and Players

—By WILLIAM J. LEWIS—

There will be a new screen deal in the Harris, beginning today, when that amusing character actress, Edna Mae Oliver, will be seen as the star of "Ladies of the Jury," which Mrs. Fiske played on the stage. A second feature will be Buck Jones in a western film, "One-Man Law."

* * *

Opening today, the Sheridan Square screen feature for three days will be "Lovers Courageous," recently shown downtown, but being presented for the first time in East Liberty. The chief roles are played by Robert Montgomery, Madge Evans and Roland Young.

* * *

Next Thursday, in Syria Mosque, there will be presented a spectacle of Russian vaudeville and music, under the title of "The Blue Bird." The company of nearly 50, with its originator, Yascha Yushny, as interlocutor, will be seen in a program of 17 varied acts, ranging from opera to burlesque. It will be under the local management of May Beegle, and is part of her concert series for the season.

Mystery

Lionel Atwill is prominent in "The Silent Witness," mystery drama, current on the screens in both the Davis and Enright.

Powell Funs In Warner

By JAMES A. BAUBIE

A new "High Pressure" William Powell topples, staggers, swaggers through a rapid-fire laugh-picture by that name that opened in the Warner yesterday.

He's a reckless promoter of wind-blown get-rich-quick schemes and starts the picture off with a round of laughs while he gets over a five-day "bender" with the aid of turkish baths, a new idea and thoughts of condemnation from the girl he loves, which part is played in her usual capable way by Evelyn Brent.

The picture is smart, funny, exciting and especially well acted, with the aid of such players as George Sidney, Evalyn Knapp, Guy Kibbee, John Wray and Frank McHugh.

In this film, Powell, usually seen as a calculating detective or bad man, becomes a calculating but callow pep talker. He fails for an artificial rubber invention and is dumfounded when the inventor proves himself, beyond a reasonable doubt, to be a nut.

Powell reveals himself a straight-faced comedian who can say funny things without laughing at his own jokes, and at the same time can make the most serious kind of love. Of course, that isn't difficult when Miss Brent is the one to be loved.

Lean Finger Accuses in The Penn

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Broken Lullaby," Ernst Lubitsch's grandest directorial gesture, is the new film in the Penn.

It is a bold indictment of war. It dares to point an accusing finger at fathers everywhere and to say:

"Old Men, you are the murderers of your soldier-sons."

No ordinary drama of war, indeed! It concerns itself, not with battlefield heroics, but with the tragedy of the vacant chair. And don't let the simplicity of its narration mislead you. It is war's aftermath, terrible in its sincerity.

The consolation from state and church that "it was your duty" is not enough for a young French veteran, who sees himself as a murderer. He goes to a German town, seeking forgiveness from the parents of the soldier he has killed. They mistake him for their dead son's friend. He cannot tell them the truth. Then the sweetheart of the boy he has killed falls in love with him.

Phillips Holmes and Nancy Carroll have featured leads. But it is Lionel Barrymore's picture. His characterization of the German father becomes a living portraiture. Louise Carter is commendable as the mother. Miss Carroll is at wit's end, like a mouse caught in a trap, in her role of the fraulein, who, while in love with one of the dead, falls in love with one of the living. Mr. Holmes, however, as the French youth, does a highly favorable piece of work.

You say that soldiers aren't like Mr. Holmes' hero!

Well, who are you that speaks?

On the stage is "Loew's Vaudevill Revue," with Bob Murphy keeping things moving. A broom and a dustpan could be used here and there, if you get what we mean.

Doc Has Grudge Against Former Sport Writers

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Old Doc Sirovitch is now an interne at one of the nation's leading sick bays.

The Doc is sore at dramatic critics because they used to be sporting writers and claims they are not responsible for facts left over 30 days.

But we'll give a list of sporting writers who weren't bad. Gen. Lew Wallace turned in a pretty good job on that Ben Hur harness race on the old jungle circuit.

Henrik Sienkiewitz did okay on the mixed doubles in Quo Vadis and Bulwer Lytton covered an elimination tournament at the Fall of Pompeii.

How about Ibanez who reported that bull fight in Blood and Sand without even having Graham McCracker at his side to help him?

And in case anything real important happens in the Doc's vicinity we'll just yank Damon Runyon out of our sporting department to touch up the sides a bit.

THE GLOBE TROTTER

The only motion pictures ever made of Col. Lindbergh's baby son are being shown in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, now being seen in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters as the outstanding part of scenes in connection with the sensational kidnaping of the most famous baby in the world. This film, taken by members of the household, was given out by Col. Lindbergh to make the public familiar with the features and appearance of the stolen boy. The pictures show Lindbergh, Jr., at play in the garden, climbing about his outdoor crib with his nurse in his nursery, together with many striking close-ups. Air views of the Lindbergh home at Hopewell, N. J., where the crime was perpetrated, show its isolation. The sectional ladder left behind by them, which was used to gain access to the baby's room, is shown placed against the window sill in the same manner as used by the abductors. An army of reporters and photographers is shown at work. The last pictures taken of the Colonel and his grieving wife are also included.

PROPOSES LAW

Senator Roscoe C. Patterson, of Missouri, author of a bill to bring kidnaping under federal jurisdiction and prosecution, declares that this crime proves the necessity for immediate action on his proposal. He also demands the death penalty for those found guilty of kidnaping. Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, voices similar sentiments. Chief Schwarzkopf, of the New Jersey State Police, makes a public appeal for aid in the search for the baby and his abductors. In the presentation the Globe Trotter gives a detailed description of the missing child and also repeats Mrs. Lindbergh's heartbroken appeal to the kidnapers to guard her baby's health.

Congressman La Guardia, of New York, discusses the petition of 145 members of the House asking Congress to consider the proposal to bring the Eighteenth Amendment before Congress for a vote. La Guardia declares that the 145 voting members represent 14,000,000 people in 26 states.

TUNNEY IN RING

Gene Tunney enters the ring again at the Kips Bay Boys' Club, in New York, this time as a referee only. The boxers are youngsters, none of them more than 11 years old.

The approach of Easter is forecast by scenes at a big chicken hatchery at Peoria, Ill. Fifty thousand chicks are shown being taken out of a giant incubator.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

(Copyright, 1932, Daily Mirror, Inc.)

The Grandest Canyon

The going's rather tough on you
And critics all are rough on you;
They brand you as a lonely street,
The only street that takes
A hardened, rugged test of one,
That tries the very best of one,
And soon discards the toney guys,
The phony guys—and rakes.

But yet I know the heart of you
Is quite a vital part of you;
And we who keep on fighting back
Are writing back to say
That lads who vent their spite on you
Are yellow as each light on you;
But we who rise above you;
Learn to love you—in our way.

J. P. S.

Stop! My Sides Ache!

Representative Sirovich (Dem.), who writes plays that get violent spankings from the critics, got himself on the front pages by charging the reviewers with this and that. As a result, those of us who report the First Nights, have been invited to Washington to debate with Sirovich and help relieve the stitch-ee-ay-shun.

Naturally, the flop-maker was a target for some gay cracks the following morning. But none of them was so amusing, we thought, as the counsel of Franklin P. Adams, who summed it up with:

"To the dramatic critics: Life is just a bowl of cherries. Don't take it Sirovich. It's too mysterovich!"

Reason Enough

One of the better known dramatic critics was being bothered by a heckler on a small-town rag who had called the critic "a girl chaser" in print.

"Sure I chase them," replied the annoyed reviewer, "they keep running away from me!"

There, Now!

At the tee of the fourth hole on the Stanford University golf course at Palo Alto, Cal., there reads a sign:

"This way to the Fareways."

"Fairway"—A proper course through channel or harbor, you dope!

Nifty

It must be older than that, but it is amusing. The one about Henry Clay, who couldn't win the support of a group of Tennessee mountaineers, until he accepted their challenge that he could shoot at and hit anything.

So he took a chance, picked up a rifle, aimed at the target and smacked the bulls-oro right on the first bounce.

"That's not bad," said one of the indifferent mountaineers, "but let's see you do it ag'in!"

"Oh, no," reneged Henry, "it's impossible to beat 100 per cent!"

The Squelch Swelegant

Marc Lachmann was enjoying a torch singer in a dimly-lit hot-spot the other 6 o'clock in the yawning. A six-footer, who was plenty saturated with Laughing Soup, stood up in front of Lachmann and hid his view of the beauty singing the melancholy tunes.

"Hey, you!" groaned Marc in his most caustic tones, "how long have you been imitating a cellophane wrapper?"

Haw!

Take it from Jiminy of the Camden, (N. J.), Courier-Post, who relays the one about the principal of a school near there. He was addressing women teachers at a weekly confab, commending them for this and scolding them for that. Finally, he asserted in all seriousness:

"There's another thing I don't want to see in this school again. I've noticed that you ladies are wearing step-ins. Please don't wear them any more."

There was a stunned silence, to which the principal was oblivious, but when he got home he told his wife what he had said, and his face still is red. It appears that what he objected to were the smocks the teachers were wearing, and he thought they were christened step-ins, the sapodillo!

Add Pepitaphs

Estelle Lorenz clicks with Pepitaph No. 11, to wit: "Here lies W. W.—The Big Stiff!" No. 12 comes from N. A. S., of St. Albans, Vt. Looks: "Here Lies W. W.—Who Is Doing One of the Better-Known Hot-Spots!"

The Infernal Triangle

The other sundown one of the columnists printed a line about a prominent New Yorker and his admiration for one of the better looking girls in one of the big shows. It seems that this prominent man is married and Living At It.

"That's a shame," remarked one of his pals in a group. "Wait till his wife reads that. It will break her heart."

"That's nothing," chirped the second, "it will kill his sweetheart!"

Modern Nell In Stanley Picture

By MILDRED FILLMORE

"Impatient Maiden," based on Donald Henderson Clarke's novel, opened yesterday in the Stanley. Prominent in the cast are Lew Ayres, Mae Clarke, John Halliday, Una Merkel and Andy Devine.

Not an important picture, its rather trivial story carries interest, thanks to Director James Whale and to certain members of the cast. It is a sort of Our Nell affair, modernized out of recognition.

A middle-aged gentleman pursues our heroine with the gallantry of a Don Juan. And when he finally finds he can't have her, he doesn't carry her off to the first sawmill or railroad track. He just bids her a polite goodbye.

Mr. Halliday plays this 1932-model villain so politely that you're almost sorry the heroine doesn't grab him. Especially after Doctor Ayres—yes, Mr. Ayres is a physician in this one—walks out on her, too, with the retort unkind, "there are only two kinds of women"—leaving audiences to infer which kind she is.

Well, she's a good girl, and in the night, when the ambulance bell clangs, it isn't poison she has swallowed at all. It's a case of appendicitis.

Now in rushes Doctor Ayres to get the appendix and the girl.

Vaudeville acts are on the stage, with Mr. Dick Powell performing from the orchestra pit and the Stanley's dancing girls skipping in between acts. The show is lively—and lengthy. Entertainers include Al K. Hall, Hill and Hoffman, Lazeeds Arabs, Slade Brothers, Betty and Jerry Brown, and the Four Sullys. Take your pick: Yesterday's audiences liked some of them a lot.

Musicians' Strike Closes Phila. Show

PHILADELPHIA, March 5.—(AP.)—A musicians' strike last night forced the closing of the musical show, "A Little Racketeer," after almost 2,000 patrons were in their seats for the performance. Musicians' union officials said the management had failed to hire enough musicians "to meet the requirements of the performance." The management replied the orchestra on hand was adequate.

Closing of the show, the management said, threw 115 employes and performers out of work.

Second German City Hails Hageman Play

MUENSTER, Germany, March 5.—(AP.)—Richard Hageman's opera "Capponsacch!" duplicated the sensational success achieved February 18 at Freiburg when it was produced last night before a packed house at the Stadt Theater.

The American composer was given a score of curtain calls at the conclusion. Harry Schurmann, tenor, formerly of Massachusetts, sang the lead.

Noted Indian, Chief Of Crow Tribe, Dies

BILLINGS, Mont., March 5.—(AP.)—Plenty Coos, chief of the Crow tribe who represented the American Indians at the burial of the unknown soldier at Arlington Cemetery, died yesterday at his reservation home at Pryor, south of here. For many months Chief Plenty Coos had been ill, blind and crippled.

Onslow, Ex-Pirate Coach, Asks Divorce

John J. Onslow, former coach of the Pittsburgh Pirates and now with the Philadelphia National League team on its Florida training trip, today filed suit for divorce in Common Pleas Court against Audrey M. Onslow, of Tarentum. Desertion is charged.

20-Year Terms Asked For Rivera Group

MADRID, Spain, March 5.—(AP.)—The Responsibilities Commission has unanimously agreed to demand 20 years' imprisonment for all generals and ministers sharing in the responsibility for the Primo de Rivera coup d'etat and dictatorship.

The punishment would affect former Ministers Martinez Anido, Castedo, Calvo Sotelo and Galo Ponte, the Marquis of Guadalhorce, Generals Federico Berenguer and Munoz Cobos and about 15 others.

3,000 Pupils Barred As Town Goes Broke

CHICAGO, March 5.—(AP.)—Three thousand children of Berwyn, one of Chicago's largest suburbs, were locked out of their classrooms yesterday. Seven schools were closed indefinitely pending the sale of tax anticipation warrants to pay teachers' salaries.

Ninety-nine teachers, unpaid for two months, were thrown out of work. A house-to-house canvass was planned to sell $120,000 worth of tax warrants. Schools of the northern district of the city were not affected.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

ROSWELL, N. M., March 5.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Eight hundred and twenty-five miles in less than five hours, and part of it in a snow storm, with Capt. Dickson doing a fine job of piloting Hal Roach's fast plane. Meeting Mrs. Rogers here coming out from the East. Hope the Lindberghs have as good luck as we did. We finally found one of our boys here that we hadn't heard of in months. He has learned to play polo here, but hasn't learned to write. Asked him why we never hear from him, said he had forgot our address. Cattle country looks fine—lot of rain no prices. If Wall street men had these old cattlemen's nerve and "tripe" you would have never heard of this panic. Cattle are so cheap that cowboys are eating beef for the first time in years. Yours,

WILL.

MUSIC — Laura Boulton, Carnegie Lecture Hall

Laura Boulton, African traveler and ethnologist, gave a fascinating lecture in Carnegie Lecture Hall last night under the auspices of the Tuesday Musical Club for the benefit of the Stephen Foster Memorial Fund. Mrs. Boulton is a most entertaining speaker, not the least pedantic, and, although a member of an expedition devoted to science, is musician enough to have gathered materials which have to do with primitive music and dance, materials for our amusement and for our instruction.

Mr. Lissfelt

We saw beautiful views of little-known African deserts, forests and villages; records of ceremonial dances, of rhythm in towing of boats and grinding of grain; motion pictures of the lecturer recording the music of native singers and players. We heard folk tales of birds and animals. We were shown details and taught how to play the marimba of the jungle. And finally, Mrs. Boulton sang one of those jolly songs of the African rabbit and accompanied her song on a little instrument whose creator, a bushman blacksmith, we had just watched at his forge.

The lecture was full of adventure and the romance of music, and it would be gratifying now to hear those records of royal flute players and of the marriage singers. J. FRED LISSFELT.

Don't Lose Hope Because of Economic Conditions

You've heard many a hideous story of desperate want—but never a more tragic one than that of Callie and her boy husband.

Five years ago they were two glowing youngsters, facing life together with laughter and hope and springtime love.

Today they are two gaunt and beaten wrecks with hope crushed and laughter stilled but the love, thank God, still going on.

And in that very agony of starving body and breaking heart, a vile man finds his opportunity.

He will help them, this kind old friend of Callie's but only if Callie pays the price.

And if she doesn't—then what can she do to get food for her frail young husband to save the little home and hold things together until the dark hour turns?

These are the questions she is asking, night and day.

"Dear Sally—

"I don't know how to tell you this story, but I must because I must know what to do.

"I am 22 years old and have been married for five years. Happy? Oh yes, very happy—or at least I was until unemployment got so bad—but now this problem that I have is nearly driving me insane.

"My husband is a fine young fellow, and is awfully good to me. I love him devotedly. He has worked so hard to make a living for us, when he could get work, but now it seems he can't get any. He has hardly had any for nearly two years, and all that time things have been pretty bad for us, especially lately.

"I work when I can get it, but that isn't often. And oh, we do love each other so!

IS DESPERATE

"And now comes that part that is simply killing me. You see there is a man whom we have known for a long, long time, who seemed anxious to help us, and at first I thought that he really meant it. But now he is beginning to want me to go places with him and to do things that it would break my heart to do.

"Please tell me what I can do. I know this sounds childish and maybe you'll say that what I have told you about our need is just an excuse for weakness, but [illegible]. We have been [illegible] and my husband is so [illegible] undernourishment and weakness that I will. I just don't know what to do. I don't want anything to do with this man, because I do love my husband. But we do need help so.

"Please tell me what I can do. I have no one who would understand to whom I can turn. Oh, you don't know how things can creep on to before we realize the danger. Please, please help me. I am desperate.

"CALLIE."

HELP WAITING

Desperate! Yes, I know you are poor, poor child. But take a tip from a friend, Callie. There's a deeper hell than the hell of hunger and cold. Don't slip into that deeper hell, Callie dear. Keep yourself decent and help will come.

Indeed there is help waiting for you now if you will take it. America may seem a cold and heartless nation to many a poor young soul struggling as you are but any man or woman you meet will give you a hand. Little girl, if you'll tell them your story as you have told it to me.

Go to the Associated Charities, or the Community Chest, or any priest or pastor, or any editor of a newspaper, show them this story and give them proof that you are Callie, and they will help you both.

Also send me your name and address at once. I may be traveling, but if you will send it to Sally Martin, in the care of this newspaper, it will reach me.

As for the man—I know some pretty tough words, Callie, but the vilest ones are too decent to use on such a cur. Let's forget him. Leave him to God, who has devised some pretty tricky punishments for tripe like that.

Hurry, Callie—Go for the help that's waiting for you. Send me your address. And here's all our love reaching out to you, little sister.

'WITH A BANG!'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Bangs, they say, ancient toy-locks of the ladies, are just around the corner. And won't we have fun! For the temptingest idea that has to do with the hair of woman—to her—next to a long, long lock and a pair of scissors, is the hair above her forehead and the thought of a bang! To just try it! And having tried it, to go bang some different way. And day by day to try different ways!

For it does make a different creature out of a lady—the simple cutting and combing of a bit of hair above her eyebrows. It turns the meek into a lady with infinite possibilities. It turns the spiritual in a gamin. The plain into something more mysterious—which is what the plain long to be. Eyes from under pony-bang can never be as sober as when they looked out from an open-face forehead. But be careful—for a bang can coarsen a pretty face. When you acquire one, ask your husband or your sweetheart for their honest-no-alibi-opinion, and if they say it's pretty but slightly "TOUGH," then alter the bang or forego it entirely. For there are soft bangs, curly ones, straight, shiny ones, snail-shell ones, and hard ones, to go with every face but one—the face that is cheapened by them. And if Jack or Pete says they are sorry but you aren't nearly so sweet with ANY kind of a one as without—then sleek back the black-satin and the honey-gold as of yore.

They say Greta has done it—the Amphitrite of the modern world. By showing her lovely face with a childish, fluffy bang in one of her latest pictures. It didn't coarsen Greta—but it banished some of her seriousness.

Whether she did it or not—the cinema-twinklers are blooming with bangs at the first-nights—and when they do, the girls of Pittsburgh and Brushville will do it, too. That sparkling little French-woman with the Italianate strain discovered long ago that she sparkled best in bangs—and she has worn them in and out of every fashion. Nice to discover what IS yourself—and have the wit and the staying power to BE it!

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Introducing a Sister

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. In introducing my sister, who is younger than I am, to a young man, how should the introduction be made? How should she be introduced to a girl friend?

2. When referring to my mother, who is dead, what name should I use? I have a stepmother, and I call her mother. Should I say, "my dead mother," or "my first mother"?

MARILYN.

1. First, dear girl, you do not introduce your sister to the young man, but the young man to your sister. Remember! The man is introduced to the woman. "Mary, may I introduce Mr. Brown?" or "Mary, this is Mr. Arthur Brown."

When you introduce your sister to a girl, say, "Mary, this is Miss Williams," or "Mary, this is Miss Jane Williams," or "Miss Williams, this is my sister, Mary," or "Miss Williams, this is my sister."

2. "My first mother" seems better, I think, than "my dead mother." Or you might make the distinction by referring to your dead mother as "my mother," and to your stepmother, as "mother."

Wedding Attendants

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to be married in April, and now I wish to invite my attendants. I intend to have one of my married sisters as matron of honor, and another married sister will be among my bridesmaids. Do I have to have a maid of honor, an unmarried girl, if I have a matron of honor, a married woman? Also, is it permissable and proper to have married women among my bridesmaids?

P. E.

If you wish, it is quite correct for you to have only a matron of honor, and not a maid of honor. However, if you wish . . . and only if you wish . . . you may have both, but it isn't necessary. Also nowadays no distinction is made between unmarried people and married people as attendants, either as the chief attendant or as bridesmaids. So make your choice just as you wish, from your married or unmarried sisters and friends.

Contract Bridge -:- (OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities)

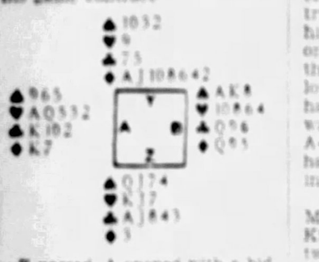
Close Figuring

About half the hands dealt should give game, for one side or the other, provided the best final make can be reached. A considerable portion of hands held require close figuring of values to determine game chances; even then the way adversely held cards lie and what opponents do are the hazards requiring careful consideration. Probably the contract could have been defeated on the hand shown below, but a stupid play enabled the declarer to fulfill his game contract.



Z passed. A opened with a bid of 1-Heart. Y bid 2-Diamonds, B bid 2-Hearts. Z passed. A dared not bid game, contenting himself with calling 3-Hearts, which his partner carried to 4-Hearts.

Having so many diamonds, Y led his Ace, followed by a low diamond. Z trumped. His return lead was a spade. Y's 10 forcing dummy's K. The declarer felt that Y probably was short of trumps, so that two leads might not drop all opposing hearts, but he played the hand correctly, by leading a low heart; when Z's Jack went up, A covered with the Queen and held the trick. The Ace was led and all opposing hearts were exhausted. A spade was led; dummy's Ace won the trick; the Q of Diamonds was led, and A discarded his last spade upon it. So far the opponents had not fallen down, but the next lead caused Z to blunder. A low club was led through Z's A-J towards declarer's K-10-2. Instead of following with his lowest card of the suit, retaining his A-J over B's Q-7, Z put up his J, enabling declarer to win two tricks in the suit, and giving him game, with a loss of only one diamond trick, one ruff, and the Ace of clubs. Had Z played low, it is probable that A would have played his K, allowing Z to win two later tricks with his A-J, back of dummy's Q. Such happenings constantly are taking place.

Below is a hand recorded by Maj. A. E. Doberciner, of the Knickerbocker Whist Club. Between now and Monday try to discover just how many tricks can be won at spades by B. The opening lead was the K of clubs.

Plans for Madge's Vacation Are Completed

"Yes, I know what's on hand," Lillian said, in answer to Dicky's question. "I also know that you can get all your part of it completed by tomorrow noon, in plenty of time for you to go away with Madge tomorrow afternoon."

Her tone was that of an executive planning a campaign, and I looked at both of them in wide-eyed wonder as to the nature of the thing they were planning. That it was something that concerned me, I was sure their manner until now had been as mysterious as that of a follower of Guy Fawkes.

Lillian answered my look, smiling at me the while.

"Yes, it's a secret," she said, laughing, "and good little girls mustn't ask questions and must go to bed early and hang up their stockings, or Santa Claus won't come. This is all figurative language, y' understand, thrown in just to let you know there's nothing serious on foot. Nothing for you to worry over. It's just a job Dicky and Harry and I have to get out in the next week, and there's no use bothering your already overtaxed mind with any of the bally details."

"I won't ask you any questions," I promised, smiling. "I don't care if you are planning to overthrow the government as long as Dicky and I can get away together for this little vacation."

"Can we get away? Just watch us!" Dicky's tone held a boyish enthusiasm which I had not heard for a long time.

"All right!" Lillian's tone was brisk. "Now, if you'll forgive me, I'm going to take a role for the next few minutes which Madge hasn't put into her third act. It's that of old maid auntie sending the children to bed. Each of you will have enough to do early in the morning. I'll stay for a few minutes, play lady's maid to Madge and lay out the things she'll want for that three-day outing. Dickey-bird, you have sense enough to pack your tooth brush, your bathing suit and your riding togs without Madge and me seeing to them?"

Dicky came over to me and with his hand on my shoulder made a grimace at Lillian.

"Always putting salt in the coffee that's you," he said. "If I don't get all my things along, there are plenty of shops within five miles where I can buy anything I want."

"Spoken like a trusting Dickybird," Lillian said, "always sure that the cuttle bone and the bird seed will be in his cage as per schedule, without his worrying about it."

"It's a good system," Dicky said defensively. "Queen Victoria had it."

"Spare me that one," Lillian said wearily. "'twas all very well for Vicky never to turn her head when she sat down, in the absolute certainty that the royal chair was behind her, but the rest of us would land on the floor. That's where you'll find yourself, some day, Dicky-bird, if you leave so much to chance."

"I've heard you pull that nifty before," Dicky retorted, "but your weak jests are beneath my notice. I can see nothing of less consequence" he quoted, with a grin.

"Have it your own way," Lillian said, "but get out of here, pronto. The Lawd He knows I ain't got no call to interfere between husband and wife, but Madge has a strenuous day in front of her tomorrow, and she's already been through enough to put three women in a sanitarium! And I know you both, you'll sit up talking over this outing till the birds begin to sing in the morning."

Dicky bent and kissed me.

"I might as well be courting a girl in a female seminary," he growled, but he gave Lillian an affectionate pat on the shoulder as he went out of the door, and we both knew that he really not only bowed to her decision but approved it.

When the door had closed behind him, Lillian slipped to it and turned the key softly. Then she swung back to me, dropping the mask of drollery she had patiently put on for Dicky's benefit.

"We never will have a narrower escape than that one when he blew in," she said, pretending to wipe the perspiration from her forehead. "I'm not sure yet that he didn't realize I had understood about the Vickers speeches."

"I am," I said confidently. "That little speech about his being jealous of my work came in so cleverly and was so artistic, that I am sure the other possible meaning of your speech never entered his mind."

"Leave us hope," Lillian intoned, and then added briskly, "get out of your things now, and go and have a good shower, while I lay out the things you'll want for your trip. I know most of them and you can add anything missing when you come back."

She worked with such expedition both while I was in my shower and after I came back from it, that in a quarter of an hour I was all packed for my three-day sojourn at the ocean-side. Then with a command to "make a vacuum of your mind and sleep until I waken you," she left me, not to sleep, but to lie awake speculating with childish wonder, of which I was ashamed, upon the secret pact which Lillian and Dicky had boasted of sharing.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Easy Life and Too Rich Food May Cause Diabetes

Diabetes, commonly called "sugar diabetes," is a disease in which the body lacks power to utilize the carbohydrate foods. Many scientific experiments have been made to discover the reason for this condition, and it is now believed to result from a lack of secretion of the pancreas. This is the organ which in the lower animals is called the "sweetbread." Other internal glands may also be out of order.

Dr. Copeland

Diabetes may occur at any age, but middle-aged and overweight persons who lead lazy, luxurious lives and indulge too freely in rich foods are most frequent victims. Children born into families where diabetes is common, sometimes fall victims to the malady.

The onset of diabetes is usually quiet and slow. There may be lack of the normal feeling of well-being. Later appear the characteristic symptoms of thirst and greatly increased secretion of urine. Sometimes, in the early stages of the disease, the appetite may be greatly increased.

If the patient is not placed under treatment at this time, weakness and emaciation follow. Later, there is increased acidity of the system, due to inability of the body to care for the foods consumed.

The presence of sugar in the blood irritates the skin. This explains the intolerable itching, boils and other skin disorders. The general nutrition of the body suffers. The teeth decay easily and the system loses its power to resist infections.

Until a few years ago, the victim of diabetes faced a dark future unless a strict diet was followed. This was changed with the discovery of insulin.

Insulin, discovered by physicians of the University of Toronto, is an extract derived from the pancreas of animals. It enables the body to utilize a certain amount of starch and sugar.

Diabetic regulation is vitally important, but the diet may be quite generous. It is not difficult to follow if the patient is willing to give up bread, cake and all pastry, cereals, potatoes, carrots, corn, beans, beets, fruits and all sweets.

The diet permitted includes all meats, with the exception of liver. Fish and sea foods, with the exception of oysters and clams, are permissible, as well as all soups that contain no flour. Celery, cucumbers, cauliflower, asparagus, spinach, eggplant, tomatoes, cabbage and squash may be taken.

Fats in the form of butter, lard, olive oil and cheese are acceptable, but in small amounts. As beverages, tea and coffee, sweetened with saccharine instead of sugar, will do no harm.

Help Children to Success

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

Sometimes we have to wait a long time before a story pieces itself together, but if we are patient, truth has a way of finally coming out.

A long time ago a friend of mine said: "Golf is a waste of time. It is such a silly game and people look so foolish chasing a little ball around." He stopped, as though his thoughts were too scathing, too scalding to take verbal form.

Last night he said: "I tried to play golf when I was younger, but I just couldn't get the hang of it. I knew I would always be a dub, so I quit."

That proved that his calling it "silly" was but an excuse, a childish defense, while the truth that he had FAILED as a golfer came out when his guards were down.

It is a pertinent thought in relation to the child who disdains to try this or that often using the man's same adjective, "silly."

When your child hears that he thinks it is silly to play hide-and-seek, you may be sure that he can't run quite as fast as the others or isn't quite as alert in finding the children who are hiding—in short, that he has not been a success at the game.

One small boy, who has never heard a word of praise when his ears and hands are clean and his hair nicely brushed, but plenty of blame when they're not, has adopted the attitude that he is glorified to be immaculate, and rather glories in his grimy fingernails. Briefly, his attempts at cleanliness weren't made successes. Only his failure to be clean was spoken of. Hence the defense of "not wanting" to be clean.

Whenever your child shies off from an activity with apparent scorn or a patronizing indifference, it is time to look into matters and try to help him excel at that activity. You may be sure that if he does a thing well and receives recognition for it he will WANT to repeat the act.

We are all like that. And remember, that these excuses which savor of a hard-boiled bravado are but defenses for having failed, and we mustn't let the children build up a long memory of failures, if we ever expect them to be successes in life.

Household Hints

When stewing apples, add a teaspoonful of golden syrup instead of sugar. This makes the juice thick and sweet.

Hold the crushed parts of a hat over the steam of a boiling kettle, and as the hat becomes moistened press into shape and leave to dry.

Rub a piece of beeswax over the heels and toes of silk stockings. This strengthens the delicate silken threads and makes the stockings last longer.

To distinguish mushrooms from poisonous fungi, sprinkle a little salt over the gills. If they turn black the mushrooms are wholesome; if they turn yellow they are poisonous.

CHILLYSAUCE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The highly-publicized Cub team lost a lot of appeal when Joe McCarthy left, but the signs point to an attractive outfit this year. Rogers Hornsby is experimenting with a flock of youngsters, several of whom are in a fair way to win regular positions on the 1932 'varsity.

Wrigley Field is the only spot in all baseball where as many as four radio stations hand out facts and fiction on the daily battles. The broadcast idea was encouraged by the Wrigley interests in contrast to the attitude of many another magnate who looked upon the radio as a thing of evil so far as the ball orchards were concerned.

In Chicago the doings on the field were carried right into the households and the Cubs became a matter of neighborly comment. The flag-contending quality of the club brought out the men folks and the women apparently were attracted by the addresses on the pretty uniforms worn by the diamond gladiators. Anyhow, the directors seem to have killed two birds with one stone it, a city where stones are not considered as fit ammunition.

To get back to The Rajah. Perhaps Hornsby has learned it is better to cultivate the good wishes of his players, and if he goes along in this direction he is apt to go further as a manager. That Hornsby knows baseball up and down and in and out cannot be denied, but the art of handling the varied types of human nature is of more import. Apparently Rogers slipped up in his treatment of Hack the Whacker.

There is talk now that Harry Taylor, a former Pittsburgh kid, will supplant Lefty Grimm at first base. At some distant date this is likely to happen, but in view of the makeup of the Bruins' first defense it is quite safe to presume that the St. Louis Dutchman will prevail at the gateway, at least until some of the youngsters have had more experience.

Stanley Hack, a Coast Leaguer, is the leading candidate for the third base corner in Chicago. For years the Bears have been weak at the Traynor station, and second base also has been a fly in the ointment. Bill Herman, of Louisville, is highly touted as he makes a bid for this job.

Woodie English, at short, and Grimm, at first, give the Cubs an edge over most clubs at their positions. Both had big years in 1931; if Hack and Herman can move even close to this pair in class, then look out for Chicago. Hornsby has one of the best catchers in captivity in Gabby Hartnett, and his outfield, with Kiki Cuyler as the keystone, should stand up.

ALLEGHENY FIVE TAKES LEAD

Siders had enough of an edge to squeeze out a two-point victory.

The failure of the Schenley attack to clink in the first period can be traced to the fine defense Springer built to stop Hyatt, leading scorer of the City League. Hyatt was held to two field goals and a foul. The lineups:

Hopes Dampened When Lily Lou Fails to Locate Vocal Teacher

CHAPTER XXVII.

"Thank fortune you said 'Miss Lansing,'" Maxine exulted on the way home. "Now it's all set. We'll hear from her tomorrow, you'll see. By the way—are you married?"

Maxine Rochon's wise, yellowish eyes were studying Lily Lou's rather wan, colorless face. Lily Lou shook her head. "No," she said tonelessly. "I'm not. I'm Miss Lansing, all right."

They walked on silently.

"Why do you ask?" Lily Lou asked suddenly. It just occurred to her that it was a queer question. Why should Maxine think . . .

"Oh, I just wondered. Most everybody has been married or something. I was. Boy out in Los Angeles. Fool that I was. But don't let on to Mrs. Manchester. She's not playing godmother to old married women. It's young artists she's interested in—don't you forget, and tell!"

"I won't. But she didn't say anything about wanting us to come."

"She will. You cinched it when you hugged the cat. I'd have done it myself, but they give me the creeps. She'll take us—"

"I don't see why—"

NEW QUARTERS

"Because she's bored to death, innocent. She'll take us in and give us about $200 worth of food and service for about 20 apiece, and she'll say she's doing it for art's sake. Helping the striving young artist. Striving young artist, my eye! She's doing it because she wants company, and something to brag about to her friends. I told you we could live for almost nothing if we just met the right people. Wanda Pillsbury hasn't bought a meal for herself in two years—"

"Still I don't think Mrs. Manchester wants us," Lily Lou insisted stoutly.

But six days later she was settled in the green and ivory guest room of Mrs. Paula Wellfield Manchester's flat, with Maxine's touseled head on the other narrow green bed, and Maxine's shabby, none too dainty garments hanging—when Maxine remembered to hang them—in the closet next to hers.

The past six days had been packed with excitement. It made Lily Lou's head ache, just to think about it. In the first place, there was the row with Mrs. Grampas. Lily Lou had paid for her room up to the fifteenth of October, and they moved on the first.

"Make her refund. Don't let her cheat you!" Maxine had urged.

LANDLADY RESENTFUL

So Lily Lou broached the subject and received a tirade of abuse. Mrs. Grampas didn't expect gratitude for all she'd done, not she! But she didn't expect to be robbed either. No indeed! And if a girl wanted to leave her honest, respectable, clean house to go God only knew where with a—a—well! Lily Lou could guess what she meant, she was too much a lady to say it—

And Maxine walked in at that point, and tweaked her nose, and Mrs. Grampas screamed, and the other roomers came running . . .

Thank goodness that was all over, and they were out of the place, and settled at Mrs. Manchester's.

Lily Lou could not see, even yet, why Mrs. Manchester should want to take them in, for $20 a month.

"Why 20 a month? That doesn't begin to pay for what we actually cost her for food and linen—"

"Oh, she doesn't need the money," Maxine said airily. "She could just as well take us for nothing, but like all her kind she's too mean for that. Wants to make us suffer a little. Oh, well! We couldn't do better for 20 bucks!"

SEEKS AUDITION

Maxine made herself at home from the first, but Lily Lou suffered agonies of shyness, afraid to take a bath lest Mrs. Manchester want the bathroom while she had it, afraid to serve herself enough food to keep a canary alive, from the dishes the maid offered at her left side. She was even afraid to practice at first. But Mrs. Manchester was out much of the time, and gradually Lily Lou began to feel at home, to accept small services from Sadie, the willing maid, and to become really fond of the three huge orange cats who wandered majestically through the rooms.

Now that she had a place to live and a job she'd have to do something about her voice . . . .

"I'll try to get an audition with Tolari Saturday or Sunday," she thought, feeling sick in anticipation. Suppose he said she had no voice? Better to know it at once, in that case . . . .

"Lily Lou Lansing, are you a coward?" she asked herself, staring at her rather greenish image in Mrs. Manchester's excellent mirror. "Are you just deliberately putting it off?"

But no . . . it was because she didn't really feel well. That was it. If she felt better it would be different. If she had gone the very moment she came to New York it would have been so much easier. Now, what with her hours at the dancing class, and having to be home on time for meals, and hearing all this talk about things she had never heard of. "Not one girl in 60 succeeds in voice," Wanda Pillsbury said. "Now if I could play the way you can I wouldn't even try to sing—"

LESSONS COSTLY

In the studio building where Wanda had her classes there were many teachers of voice. She saw them going in and coming out of their doors. Heard snatches of song, catch phrases—"She forces that white tone!" "Voice too far back!" "Never properly placed—"

Nobody had ever placed her voice. Should it have been placed? Prices were frightening, too. Five dollars for half an hour was just nothing. Dwight Gwin, the coach, whose studio was on the same floor with Wanda's, got 20. Very likely Tolari would charge as much. And then there was this business of getting an audition. Some of the teachers had secretaries. Wanda Pillsbury said they nearly all made you pay for at least 10 lessons in advance.

"I'm going to have an audition with Tolari on Sunday," she wrote the family, glad that she had something definite to write at last. "I'm going to take three songs, 'Lo Hear the Gentle Lark,' and 'The Bell Song from Lakme' and the 'Mad Scene from Lucia'—"

Her choice seemed important—impressive, as she wrote, but on her way to the Bronx to sing for the great Tolari, it seemed smarty and silly. He'd think she had a nerve, to try the 'Mad Scene' . . . better leave that out . . .

She grew suddenly confused and dizzy wandering through the unfamiliar streets, hating to ask, afraid she'd get off at the wrong place . . .

In front of a dusty brick house set back a few feet from the street, with a tiny plot of lumpy grass and sickly flowers in front, she paused to look up the address she had taken from the telephone book. This was the place, all right . . .

A slatternly looking woman admitted her. After a long wait in the hall a small, dark-eyed man in a velvet jacket opened the door of the front room and motioned her in, hospitably.

Tolari! The master. The man who Miss Seaman said could make her famous . . .

"My teacher, Miss Augusta Seaman—" she began in a tight, small voice.

He didn't want to hear about Miss Seaman, he wanted to try her voice. She persisted. "Miss Seaman. You must remember her. She studied with you, years ago in Chicago—"

Years ago . . . but he looked so young . . . Of course. There was a mistake. It was the wrong Tolari. She knew it before he told her, laughing:

"Oh, old Ceesare Tolari! But he had not taught for five years! Come, come! He is senile, a paralytic now. Only the funeral march left for him. You had better stay with me. Come, we shall try your voice."

She was ashamed of the way she pushed by him, to the door. Her silly, mumbled apologies. He must have thought her crazy. She might as well have stayed and let him try her voice. . . . Tolari no longer teaching . . . all Miss Seaman promised gone. . . . Two months wasted, most of her money spent. . . .

The day had turned cold. It was good to get into the warm living room, and sink into one of the deeply cushioned chairs. Just to be comfortable. To drink the good hot tea that Mrs. Manchester offered, and not to think of her voice, her future, anything . . . just be comfortable . . . rest . . .

Presently she went into her room to get the home papers that May sent her nearly every week, all rolled up with cotton twine.

The inner paper was turned to the society section, heavily marked with black pencil. It fell open in her hands.

Synopsis

Lily Lou Lansing, young and pretty telephone operator, gives up her opportunity for an operatic career to marry wealthy Ken Sargent. Ken's mother threatens to have the marriage annulled. Ken loses his position with his father, but secures a better one. The young couple take a small apartment and are ideally happy. Then, one night, Lily Lou awakens to hear Ken sobbing. Next day, Lily Lou meets Peggy Sage, an old friend of Ken's and is stunned to learn from her that Ken lost his job. Later, she is relieved when Ken explained he did not take her into his confidence because he wanted her to be proud of him. After Ken leaves the next morning, a knock comes to the door. It is Ken's father. He asks Lily Lou to give up Ken and informs her their marriage was annulled. He gives her $500 and Lily Lou goes to New York. Her money soon begins to run low.

Now Go On

It was not the man Lily Lou wanted to see.

ALL IN A DAY — By MARK HELLINGER

I DON'T like to run too many letters in this column because, no matter how good they are, I can always hear five of my six readers saying "look at that guy using stuff from other people. What a racket he's got!" Such an accusation scars my very soul, and I determine right then and there that I will use no more mail from the readers. Then, the very next day, an interesting letter turns up—and I use it. Maybe I need an operation on my determination.

Seriously though, I feel today that I need a little encouragement. What with this and that, the skies are very gray, sonny boy. So, when I opened my mail and found a beautiful letter, I felt that you folks would stretch a point and permit me to use it. I'm one of those guys who honestly believes in giving a man his flowers while he's living. My only trouble is that I have to send them to myself.

Here, then is that grand note:

"I read your stories quite frequently," writes C. B. See, of Detroit, Mich. "I don't know just why, never having applied a Freudian test. They evidently contain a quality of some sort that makes it seem worth while to take the time to peruse them.

"Furthermore, I had a reasonable belief in your intelligence until you announced that 'Small Town Story' was the best story you ever heard in connection with prohibition. It—the story, is so full of inconsistencies and lacks so much in understanding of life's real values that your attitude creates disappointment and a certain amount of sympathetic sorrow.

"Your attitude, Mr. Hellinger, is that of one whose soul is steeped in sensibilities by Broadway and its contiguous territory, to the detriment of those finer and more permanent qualities which are the natural concomitant of informed existence in the hinterland.

"For New York City is, by and large, just a big hog wallow. I lived there four years and I know something of the filth with which the city reeks. Something happened there recently which will indicate one of the reasons for my disgust with your city and the ugliness it spawns.

"After an absence of nearly 10 years I drove to New York last fall, and had occasion to park my car on One Hundred and Sixteenth street, near St. Nicholas avenue. When I returned, I found that a lot of swill from some garbage pail had been poured over the hood of my car. It smelled to high heaven, and I had to rout out the night watchman of a garage and bribe him to wash the car before I could drive to my hotel.

"I do not believe a similar piece of vandalism, or its equal, could occur in any other city of the country. At least it never has to me, and I've been in most of them.

"Now such things as that—and I am referring to my experience with the swill—seems to be of a piece with the mentality that worships a bowl of booze and is lacking in the capacity to enjoy anything beyond a belly full of liquor. In all sincerity, you seemed to think that 'Small Town Story' contained an indictment of prohibition. In my opinion, every line of it was derogatorily debasing. It was absolutely vile.

"I am quite aware that my fulminations are futile; that you will continue the even tenor of your way—a way marked by booze, brutality and braggadocio. But I merely want to repeat that many readers are sickened by such a display of hog wallow mire as appeared in your 'Small Town Story.'"

You mean, Mr. See, that you didn't like the story? . . .

BAD CHECKS, as is generally known, have caused more losses to cafe and restaurant proprietors than anything else—including bad food. The boys have been trying to combat the evil ever since checks came into common usage, but with very little effect.

Martin Mooney sends me word from Hollywood, however, that two gentlemen named Musso and Franks have stumbled on a system that has saved them many, many dollars in the phony check racket. They still get stuck occasionally, of course, but the stickings are few and far between.

Their system is simple. In their restaurant, an attractive frame hangs in front of the cashier's desk. The frame contains photostats of all bad checks received from guests and some of the names would surprise even the most hardened Broadway cynic.

If a bouncing check is not made good within six months—and the welcher is given every opportunity—the elastic bit of paper is cameraed and placed in the grand rubber gallery. This gives the phony signer a spotlight display in the National Gallery of Gypery, with the whole world passing in review. It's a very definite warning—and it works.

Not bad, my friends. Not bad.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS Junior Komic Club

Today's the big day for the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club. There are special meetings for every chapter—some of these being held in the morning and others up to 1 and 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The thing of special interest today is the announcement that there is a new and fascinating contest in which one member from each chapter will win a dandy Komic Club sweater made expressly for this junior organization. The contest is open only to members of our club.

All you have to do to enter the contest is to color the outline picture of Popeye which is to appear in the Junior Komic Club department of tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph. You may use crayons or water colors, and if you would like suggestions as to what colors to use, turn to the Comic Section in tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph. There you will find Popeye in colors. It is not essential to follow these colors. If you have any ideas of your own as to the colors Popeye should wear, use your own coloring. You can make a tracing of the Popeye drawing if you wish.

When it is finished, fill in your name, address, age, and the name of the chapter in which you are enrolled. Blanks will be printed tomorrow for this purpose. Mail your finished picture to the Junior Komic Club, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh. Do not delay. Get out your crayons or paints and be ready for tomorrow. In case of ties, duplicate awards will be made. Winners will be announced at the Junior Komic Club meetings next Saturday. All entries must be submitted before next Wednesday night and none but members of the Sun-Telegraph Junior Club can enter this contest.

NOTE—We do not ask our readers to know everything. But we do expect our readers to be familiar with good literature. That's why we are going to a lot of trouble to print translations from other languages. Today we give you an example of Scandinavian literature. Oh, that's all right. Don't mention it.

UPWARD, ever upward, over the snow-covered mountains trudged Erik Erikson, whose father before him was Erik Erikson, and his grandfather before him, making it difficult for Erik Erikson to be himself. He was out gathering herbs and roots to make root beer for the wintah, which would soon close down like a small town bank. But what was this?

A girl! A girl radiant, youthful, glowing with vigor, so that the snow melted for several feet around where she stood.

"I don't believe I know you," said Erik, blushing violently.

"But I know you," said the girl, hands on hips, as she did a peasant little dance step, heel and toe. "Aren't you the big fjord dealer down at the Last Chance Gambling Hjall?"

Erik thought awhile, and then shyly answered, "Yass," but wagged his head in the negative. The girl reached out and pinched Erik's cheek shyly.

"I see you're Finnish," she said, looking deep into his eyes.

Then she turned like some lithe animal and ski-ed off into the sunrise, until she was only a speck in Erik's eye. And even yet, they say, Erik Erikson, now an old, bent man, totters around his juniper patch, hoping that the Girl, as he thinks of her, will come back. But nothing ever comes back to Erik but winter—inexorable winter.

Bonds for Poor Relief

The Money Should Be Distributed as Wages Rather Than as a Dole—Comment on Local News.

Confronted with the necessity of raising from $7,000,000 to $10,000,000 additional for unemployment relief, and distrustful of being able to raise it through private contributions, the Allegheny County Emergency Association and Welfare Fund propose the city and county shall issue bonds for the purpose. If this is done the money should be distributed as wages for public work rather than as a dole.

The people of the city and the people of the county have authorized bonds which have never been issued. The city has authority to borrow $6,000,000 for the construction of a downtown subway and the county has authority to borrow $6,000,000 for the construction of a town hall. Both are needed, both could be built now more cheaply than in boom times, and both would provide many jobs.

Members of the Allegheny County Bar Association have expressed themselves by a 3-to-1 vote through a secret ballot in favor of the repeal of prohibition. There can be no doubt that the lawyers reflect public sentiment on this vexatious subject. Those who maintain in the face of these and other evidences of opposition to the eighteenth amendment that Pennsylvania is dry in its predilections are only deluding themselves.

The Pittsburgh Motor Club reports that less than half the motorists in Pennsylvania have had their automobiles officially inspected. It fears there will be a stampede in the last few days. The inspection must be made before the end of this month, and those who have been tardy about it would do well to attend to the matter at once, especially since the tests are showing that most cars require repairs or adjustments.

The Manchester Educational Center displays a wide-awake spirit in its plan to open a school for unemployed men next Monday. There will be classes from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. three days a week. There is reason to believe that the school will attract many pupils, and that the pupils, as a result of their studies, will be more valuable when they go back to work.

The Little Sisters of the Poor are to be congratulated on their fine new Home for the Aged, in o which their guests were moved yesterday. The city is to be congratulated, too, on possession of this splendid institution. Mother Superior Agatha invites the public to inspect the home tomorrow—an invitation which no doubt will be accepted by many, since Pittsburghers generally, without regard to denomination, take pride in it.

The new Home for the Aged, replacing the build- ing destroyed by fire last year, has been made as nearly fireproof as possible. Then there are extra stairways. Fire-fighting apparatus is handy, and fire alarm boxes have been installed every here and there throughout the building. The Home has corrected the mistakes that the fire disclosed. It is to be hoped other Pittsburgh institutions have also profited by the Home's sad experience.

Business men and property owners of Wood street have taken a forward step in organizing an association to improve the street and to improve business on the street. And we are glad to note that they will support projects for the general benefit of the community, too. Neighborhood associations such as this can make themselves powerful instruments for good, while at the same time promoting their own interests.

The campaign that the American Legion is con- ducting to find jobs for 1,000,000 men is impressive. Positions have been obtained so far for well over 8,000 in Pennsylvania. The Legion's task is a hard one; but so was its task in the World War. If the public should co-operate as whole-heartedly in the present campaign as it did in 1917-1918, the Legion undoubtedly would succeed in its difficult undertaking just as it succeeded then.

Every large employer of labor, whether the labor be manual or clerical, can help the American Legion's campaign by adding at least one man to his payroll. Every householder can help by having some household chores, such as cleaning, painting or tidying up the premises, done by unemployed men or women whom the Legion seeks to help. Get into communication with your neighborhood Legion post.

It is gratifying to note the activity of the police against lottery operators and other gambling operations. Persons in desperate need of money are under strong temptation right now to risk what little they have in the hope of gaining more. But they should, of course, be all the more careful because of their condition not to throw away their money in gambling schemes. Gamblers who prey on the needy are among the most contemptible of criminals.

Sixty leading Pennsylvania farmers met in Harris- burg this week to consider the adoption of a trade-mark on high-grade Pennsylvania farm products which conform to certain government specifications. The plan should foster pride in home grown products and make it easier to resist the competition of dealers who ship trade-marked eggs, potatoes and fruit into Pennsylvania from other states.

The movement for the construction of a canal by way of French Creek to connect the Allegheny River with Lake Erie gains momentum, as is shown by the Upper Allegheny River Improvement Association's report declaring it "economically justified." Pittsburgh favors the Beaver River route for a canal to Lake Erie. But we cannot afford to ignore the claims that are being made for French Creek.

The Washington Bicentennial observance was not a mere celebration of February 22, but it is to be carried on throughout the year. Accordingly, the American Weekly Magazine Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph will present tomorrow another full-page Washington picture in colors, suitable for framing—a reproduction of the famous painting of "Washington Crossing the Delaware."

The American Weekly tomorrow will have a num- ber of interesting illustrated articles which will give readers several hours of good entertainment, while at the same time adding to their education. One of the articles deals with a gigantic new telescope to be set up near the Grand Canyon and which may prove the moon is not the lifeless globe most astronomers consider it.

Vivid action photographs from the Shanghai war zone will be shown in the Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. Another attractive feature of the section is a page of pictures of interesting babies. Then there is the "Remember?" page, on which will be found a photograph of Pittsburgh clubwomen taken in 1905 and other old time pictures that will call forth pleasant memories.

Why Send a Boy on a Man's Job?

Administration ineptitude leaves eight million jobless dependent upon private relief for the barest necessities of life in a Land of Plenty.

These workers, willing to work, asking for the right to work, NOT CHARITY, are handed words at Washington and ONLY WORDS.

The Administration owes these willing workers a duty to provide them with the opportunity to work.

The one way to create the necessary jobs is to have the Government finance a gigantic scheme of essential public works through the flotation of a $5,000,000,000 Prosperity Bond issue. There is plenty of money in the country; the issue would be oversubscribed. Create jobs for the jobless and business at once improves, dormant factories come back to life, creating more jobs and more business. Everyone benefits.

Can the Administration see only the financiers? What about the 8,000,000 jobless? Are they to be left to suffer in a land of abundance?

Marry-Go-Round

The Sweet and Loudown

A man used to bestow his heart upon a woman—but, nowadays, about all he usually offers her is a 30-day loan.

* * *

When a man of the violin-age marries a girl of the saxophone-age, somebody always gets out of step right during the wedding-march; and after that it's just a race for the divorce court.

* * *

When you see what some women finally marry, you just know they were the kind of girls who kissed with their eyes closed.

* * *

When a woman gets old, she turns to charity, bridge or religion—but not until she has tried every brand of henna and experimented with every kind of facial.

A woman may resent a look of anger or scorn in a man's eyes; but the only look that she absolutely cannot endure is that "faraway look," with which he gazes straight through her—at another woman.

* * *

They'd never admit it, but there is something akin to envy between a married woman who is sure of her social status and a lifetime of placid, unexciting evenings, and a glittering gold-digger who wears Paris gowns and orchids one month and doesn't know where her rent is coming from the next.

* * *

Most bridal couples on the way to the altar have that strained, tense look—probably because he is nervous about what he's getting into, and she is nervous for fear he may back out of it.

A man's flattery, like a woman's complexion, should be laid on delicately and with enough artistic restraint to make it seem real and convincing.

* * *

It is seldom that a girl enjoys sitting in the spring moonlight, unless there is something in it besides "poetic solitude."

* * *

A man can't see why he should give a woman ALL his love, when he can so easily sub-divide it, like a suburban tract, and make a lot of women happy.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

When You Came In

When you came in my life's dim room
It brightened like a place of gloom
When many candles leap to flame,
All else unchanged, yet naught the same!

Each corner once so dull, so dark,
Reflected then the living spark:
I saw the gleam, the glow of gold
Like daisy fields when buds unfold.

My life's dim room where shade had been Throbbed, pulsed with bloom, when you came in!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 5.—Every restaurant has at least one teetering table and I never fail to draw it. Result: What is intended as a pleasant interlude becomes a juggle party. Once a table begins to teeter the smart thing is to throw it out the nearest window.

There are various methods of unjiggling a table. The leading one is the menu trick. Call a waiter and tell him the table is a bit tippy. He picks up a menu, bends it into a pad, slips it under the shortened leg, beams a "Voila!" and goes away as though he's a one.

The table is all right on your side, but bursts out with the bobbies on the other. Hold 'em Yale! After futile efforts to relieve table maladjustments by others at a party last night I decided to fix things myself. After all, I'm not as stupid as rumors have it.

At an auspicious moment when everybody was bubbling with conversation, I slipped to my knees and disappeared under the table. Then I crawled toward the leg causing the trouble. I had about made it when, accidentally, I put my hand on a lady's shoe.

Expecting a shriek, my heart leaped up and lighted on the tonsils. But she merely lifted the table cloth, peeked and sniffed: "Some old fool getting kittenish." I decided to scoot back to my chair, but in the dark I lost my bearings. Me and Livingston!

There's a situation. If some head waiter dragged me out, everybody would believe I was just snooping around to fix a table leg. Yes, they would. Can't you see the sly pointing and sniggering behind my back? Old Peeping Tom from Park avenue.

He's looked funny lately any way. A queer gleam in his eyes. And have you noticed how he suddenly forgets in the middle of a sentence. They say his wife has to go everywhere with him and when he's alone he plays with blocks and blows goo-goo bubbles.

* * *

Well, there I was in a Gandhi squat and the little left of what was never a hot reputation, cake-walking on the brink of a volcano. I couldn't sit at the table with the rest of the people, eat and enjoy myself. No, I must be Master Fixit. Fixit, the Table Leg Boy. The Bright Little Helper. Why did I come out to dine? I leave my spoon in the cup. I'm a food dribbler. This time next year I'll be wearing oil cloth bibs. And catching at my thumb.

* * *

I suppose my soup is cold. Guests who know how to mind their own business are snaffling the sole. Go ahead, enjoy it. O, sole mia! That's a honey of a crick in my neck and there's no feeling in by right leg either. Start out to fix a table's leg and end up pinching my own. Some lady is cooing: "Isn't this delicious sole?" She can have it—and my brown silk necktie with the white embroidered anchors to boot. Eating sole is like eating damp blotters. I couldn't be interested in waffles and sausage right now. My ambition in what is left of my life is to get the blazes out of here.

* * *

I don't feel so rugged, either. A bit smothery. I could tweak my wife's ankle and whisper, "It's me!" Such grammar! Start over. Now. Tweak her ankle and say, "It is I." She might not recognize me, whale away and kick me smack in the pan. After all, it's been a long time since I've been under a table. In the Cincinnati days that's where Foucar's porter usually found me when he came to clean up. Smack in the sawdust.

* * *

That guy at the other end is getting up. I'll make for his chair. No, he's changed his mind again. Isn't anybody ever called to the telephone? I wish Herbert Bayard Swope was here. Now they have taken my chair. Bow heads for the absent guest. He's no longer with us. No sir, the idiot is still under the table and growing weaker. Tell the musicians to play something sad from Ibsen or one of the old masters. Dining out, my foot. I won't even rate a sandwich out of this. Why didn't I shoot myself before I came of age?

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

How do you feel about flogging children—your own little boy or girl, for instance; your small sister or brother?

How would you like to see a tiny body bared—the frail ribs ridged beneath the bluish skin—and then behold that flesh lashed with a length of common garden hose applied by a grown man?

How long do you think you could stand a sight like that? What would happen inside you, as you heard the gasps and screams and frantic sobs of that beaten child and the complacent grunts of the man wielding the hose?

Or, in case garden hose floggings are not to your taste, how would you like to see two boys stripped in a public courtroom and unmercifully beaten with a leather belt applied by a 250-pound police sergeant?

What do you think of these practices?

Do you think they are an effective argument for adults to use on children?

Do you think they prove that adults who use such methods are reasonable, controlled, human beings themselves?

Do you think that the legalization of such practices is a credit to America—that it will advance her record as a civilized nation?

Or does the very thought of such horrors make you gag with disgust and burn with shame and anger?

I trust it does. And I assure you that if it does, I burn with you. But that's all the good it will do either of us; for under the laws of various of these United States, these practices are not only permitted but are advised and encouraged. And what in heck are you and I going to do about it?

No, I'm not working myself into a stew over nothing. Recently the people of this great, enlightened, Christian nation have been regaled by two such exhibitions. Listen!

In the Morse Public School, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., there is a certain ungraded class for backward and deficient children—children who through no fault of their own are mental cripples. It is a difficult class to teach. There is not much joy or desire in those pathetically darkened young faces bending clumsily over incomprehensible lessons.

Some hearts might be touched by such a sight. They might feel that these handicapped little ones deserve the utmost tenderness and patience, to offset the burden life has laid upon them.

But, of course, all people do not see such things alike. Principal Max Reutershan harbored no such impractical and sentimental notions about the exasperating young members of that ungraded class.

For example, why should he waste time reasoning with Richard Meyers, age 12, when there were far quicker methods of persuasions? So he produced that other method of persuasion, and Richard Meyers screamed when his mother tried to take off his shirt that night. The blows of that "persuasion" had turned his body into a horror his mother will not soon forget.

And now you are thinking what you would have done if that had happened to your deficient little child? Mrs. Meyers also had many thoughts—but they did her no more good than yours would do you.

Max Reutershan, questioned hotly by the Meyers' lawyer, said: "You cannot do anything about it. The law gives me the right to use rubber hose on pupils, and I do it. I call my rubber hose my 'goldfish.' Is that not a good name? I use it on my own children. HOW CAN I MANAGE CHILDREN UNLESS I BEAT THEM?"

And the Poughkeepsie superintendent of schools backed Max Reutershan up.

I advise the Poughkeepsie Chamber of Commerce to include this little incident in their next promotion letter. It will doubtless induce many progressive parents to bring their children to this advanced community.

The other incident reflects equal honor upon the progressive settlement of Woodbury, N. J. Poughkeepsie, having won the scholastic record, Woodbury competed for honors in a public courtroom, where Recorder Frank L. Johnson demonstrated the intelligence and culture of the New Jersey commonwealth by sentencing three boys, all under 16, to be publicly lashed by a 250-pound policeman, who removed his belt for the purpose.

How edifying to have watched the leers, grins and slobbering satisfaction upon the faces of the audience that watched that exhibition. What a pleasing recommendation for Recorder Frank L. Johnson in his next campaign.

And we're the big bunch of hypocrites who piled into a war because they told us another nation was cutting off little children's hands!

Oh, yeah!

Isn't It So?

The average man is a poor judge of his own importance.

Some women seem unable to appreciate men who act like gentlemen.

Lack of foresight is bad, but inability to see what is happening is worse.

It's as difficult for some women to drive an automobile as it is for others to drive a nail.

A man who probably speaks from experience says that one of the most frigid things in life is a woman's cold shoulder.

Text For Today Be ye therefore followers of God, as dear children; And walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweetsmelling savour.—Ephesians, v:1, 2.

Senator Moses Must Be Careful

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

The "political recess" is over, as far as the Hoover administration is concerned, and Democrats need not take it too seriously henceforth. Senator Moses has had his fling, and the Jahncke of the administration, whose recent speech in Ohio, which served as a curtain raiser for Mr. Seabury's, is to speak again on "The Hoover Administration: A New Chapter in the Record of Republican Service"!!

The "new chapter" will tell of 8,300,000 men denied the right to earn their daily bread, of 40,000,000 men, women and children in distress, of the greatest flood of bankruptcies and bank failures in American history, of a deficit of $2,000,000,000 in times of peace, of a resulting increase in taxes that will be appalling, of factories closed and foreign markets lost, of bungling in international affairs. The Jahncke of the administration will have much to talk about.

But Senator Moses, who is a clever man, evidently was indulging in his penchant for irony when he announced that the people, delighted with the "new record," would rise and march like an army with banners, with Mr. Hoover in the lead to a Hoover victory in November.

* * *

Tom Reed Should Have Been a Warning

It is never an easy matter to tell just when Senator Moses is indulging in irony. He is the Bernard Shaw of his party. Sometimes he is subtle; but his reference to the boundless popularity of the President was rather too broad. He was playing for the inward chuckles on the Republican side of the chamber. He likes that sort of thing. We can imagine the scene in the Republican cloakroom afterwards. But he is venturing on dangerous ground.

Familiar as he is with political history, he must realize that irony is a dangerous thing for statesmanship to play with.

Tom Reed loved nothing better than irony, but it probably lost him the presidency. No one knew when to take him seriously. He realized his mistake too late, and warned aspiring politicians against a reputation for humor. But humorists, like Senator Moses and Will Rogers, cannot resist the temptation to get the transient laugh. To them, it is the cream on the cup.

The Senator could not resist the impulse to refer to the Hoover administration as singularly successful, making for the prosperity and happiness of a care-free people, knowing that nothing could be better calculated, first to surprise, and then amuse. But Tom Reed should have been a warning. So many humorists have thus parted with their reputation for sober leadership.

* * *

A Speech Ruined Knott

Many years ago Proctor Knott, of Kentucky, brilliant and solid intellectually, wrecked his career by indulging in just such irony as that of Senator Moses in his reference to the popular acclaim for Mr. Hoover and the fruits of his administration. The occasion was not vastly important.

It grew out of a bill providing an appropriation for Duluth, then an obscure village which had been given a rather extravagant future. He was against it, but he attacked it with the double-edged weapon of irony. Nothing better in that line has ever been heard in Congress. He tried, with a straight face, to outdo the sponsors of the measure in his rhapsodic tributes to the glories of Duluth; just as Senator Moses sought to out-Jahncke Jahncke for the sake of the laugh. That speech ruined Knott.

And if the country has not been as much amused by the irony of Moses as with that of Knott, it has been diverted and amused. Perhaps the humor of the Senator was a bit broader than that of the Kentuckian. But it was good humor and everyone enjoyed it. The danger is that Moses may get a reputation as a humorist which may make it difficult for the public ever to take him seriously again.

A clever man, popular with the press correspondents, we should be sorry to see him go the way of Reed and Knott.

Mark Twain Was Too Funny

Humor collects its toll of the humorist, and when he seeks to be funny he sometimes makes dreadful blunders.

Take the case of Mark Twain: It was in 1876, when the Republican national administration was reeking with corruption. Most of the leaders—the President's secretary, three members of his cabinet, the Vice President, the chairman of the House Committees on Ways and Means, Appropriations, Judiciary, the Committee on Railroads and Commerce, and a dozen more, had been caught red-handed.

It was at that time that Blaine, speaking at Saratoga, put his hand into his high hat and pulled out—not the whisky ring scandal, not the credit mobilier scandal, not the railroad scandals, not the Navy contract scandal, the Mulligan letters, but a wee bit of a rabbit which scampered about in a tiny corner of the country called Tweed. He was a tiny figure, but he was expected to furnish a hiding for the big and burly figures of the pious leaders of the nation, whose crimes had affected, not the people of a town, but of the entire country. That was the strategy then—in '76.

And that year, Mark Twain, good party man, introducing Senator Hawley, of Connecticut, who had served as head of the Centennial, made the point that he was unique among national figures in office in that he had handled millions of dollars without stealing any of it. Of course, the audience laughed. It was funny and almost entirely true. But after the laugh there was some meditation and in Republican circles no little consternation, and that ended Mark Twain's services to the Republicans on the stump. He was too funny.

* * *

It Could Have Been Funnier

But, perhaps, we are to have a laughing campaign, for has not the Republican State Committee of New York just adopted resolutions highly laudatory of the success of the Hoover administration?

In view of the notorious fact that the Republican leaders in New York would give a king's ransom for a way to escape the renomination of this highly successful President, the committee may have been indulging in the same irony as that which we are afraid has injured Senator Moses' reputation for sobriety and truth. But still it is a dangerous indulgence.

However, it could have been funnier. Since the humorists appear to have taken charge of the Hoover campaign, it might have reiterated the pledges and claims of the Hoover managers in that never-to-be-forgotten campaign of 1928.

It might have rejoiced in the President's promised "elimination of poverty" and "a chicken in every pot" and "sanitary plumbing in every home" and "the shortening of the workingman's hours" and "high wages and great dividends."

Perhaps that would have made the humor a bit too broad, but we can't help hoping that the Jahnckes of the administration will, in purely reminiscent mood, recall these promises, pledges, advertisements in future speeches. If the laugh is what they are after, we can guarantee results.
